Thousands Flee Waves

Roof-top level waves pound walls of new subdivision fronting Lake Ontario

Times News Services

Pounding waves pushed by gusting winds forced the evacuation of thousands of families on both the Canadian and U.S. sides of Lakes Erie and Ontario today.

While the Canadian evacuations were carried out smoothly, troops were called in on the U.S. side of Lake Erie to prevent looting of abandoned homes.

Hardest hit was the Windsor area where an estimated 1,600 abandoned their homes when easterly winds reached 50 miles an hour. The winds began a westerly shift today but hundreds of families did not return.

In Toledo, winds pushed water from western Lake Erie into city and suburban streets and flooded neighboring shoreline communities. Water was two feet deep in some streets.

MUCH DAMAGE

About 500 were evacuated in Toledo and although there were no reports of injuries, officials said damage would be considerable.

The water level dropped several feet early today.

There were requests from some western Ontario townships for the use of troops in flood control, and in the Ontario legislature Liberal Richard Ruston of Essex-Kent asked that the province be declared a major disaster area so that federal aid could be provided.

Flooding on the north shore of Lake Erie extended from the mouth of the Detroit River, 50 miles east to Erieau.

Many residents had to flee their homes for the third time in six months. Earlier storms forced them out last November and last month.

About 1,000 residents in Mersea Township, near Lake Erie, were evacuated. At least 30 cottages, some of them new, were lost in one stretch of shoreline, said Reeve Clinton Tofflemire.

HOMES FLOODED

He said only one of the cottages was occupied and it was safely evacuated.

Another 100 homes in subdivisions were flooded, he said, and at least 750 acres of prime farmland flooded and another 1,500 acres threatened as a major dike in the area broke down.

Some residential parts of Mersea township were under six feet of water.

With nowhere for its water to empty, the Detroit River backed up halfway to Lake St. Clair, creating the most serious flooding so far along its shores.

At La Salle, water reached the centre of the community one-quarter of a mile from the river.

Flooding was reported in parts of Windsor itself, where a section of Riverside Drive was closed, and in lakefront communities on the south shore of Lake St. Clair, where some persons had to be evacuated as early as Saturday.

HIGH WAVES

High waves broke through the rebuilt dikes on the east side of Pelee Island, flooding about 500 acres of farmland.

Saltfleet Township council declared a state of emergency in that community at the western tip of Lake Ontario.

Lakeshore residents in the Toronto area watched the strips of land between their homes and Lake Ontario grow still narrower as five-foot waves added to soil erosion.

Meanwhile a spring storm sweeping the midwestern U.S. dumped up to 18 inches of snow and brought new dangers to weakened levees along the rain-swollen Mississippi River system.

In Kaskasia Island, 60 miles south of St. Louis, five-foot waves and 60-mile-an-hour winds forced evacuation of all but 16 of the island's 300 residents.

So far, seven million acres of land along the Mississippi system are under water, 6,000 families have been evacuated and damage has reached $160 million.

NEW BILL SOON ON MERGERS

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Monday he intends to introduce a bill "in the next day or two" empowering the cabinet to order amalgamation of local areas without plebiscites.

British Columbia Supreme Court ruled recently that the municipal affairs minister cannot order the amalgamation of Kamloops and Kelowna with their respective suburbs without a vote.

Lorimer said Monday the court decision was based on existing law, not new legislation of the kind he is proposing.

"I don't think there is any change," he said.

"When I discussed the amalgamation issue (involving Kamloops and Kelowna) I said there would have to be legislation brought in, and there will be legislation brought in," said Lorimer.

B.C. Eyes More Parks For Boaters

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Creation of a series of marine parks in British Columbia inland waters from the Gulf Islands through to Prince Rupert, was proposed today by Resource Minister Robert Williams.

Parks in the government's tentative marine park program include:

Two on West Redonda Island — Roscoe Bay and Walsh Cove;

Three parks on Cortez Island—Carrington Bay, Squirrel Cove and Von Donop Inlet;

Two in the vicinity of Rivers Inlet and one at Kingcome Inlet, situated north of Campbell River.

Surveys are being conducted in other areas, the minister said.

"We have one of the most beautiful inland waters in the world," he said. "It is essential that we plan now to preserve key areas on those islands for the people of this province."

PRIVATELY-OWNED

The minister admitted that the Gulf Islands presented a difficulty as most of the land is privately-owned — some by large corporations, foreign and Canadian.

But he emphasized that more marine parks would be established in the Gulf Islands to complement those already heavily used by both Canadian and U.S. boaters.

"The Gulf Islands are vitally important because of their close proximity to the densely populated east coast of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland," he said.

DESOLATION SOUND

The new government's first marine park, announced Monday, is at Desolation Sound, a 22-square-mile area situated 19 nautical miles from Campbell River.

Widely known for its warm waters and scenic anchorages Grace Harbor, Prideaux and Tenedos Bay — the park's winding waterways are safe for trailer boats and even canoes. It includes freshwater lakes and 6,653 miles of foreshore.

Crash Kills 106

Times News Services

BASEL — A British charter airliner carrying 139 tourists to Basel's spring fair crashed and exploded in a blizzard today.

Police announced 106 persons were killed.

Some of the 40 survivors escaped without injury, police said.

The Unicorn Travel Agency in England, which organized the flight, said 90 per cent of the passengers were women, on a day trip to the Swiss fair.

The plane, on a flight from Bristol, crashed five minutes before it was scheduled to land.

Farmers interviewed by Swiss radio said 20 persons on the ground were injured when pieces of the plane struck a farmhouse.

The entire area was isolated by power and telephone failures.

The plane approached Basel airport from the north for an instrument-aided landing in heavy snowfall.

Then, the airport said, the pilot pulled up and roared away to the south disappearing quickly in the blinding snow. Ten minutes later radio contact broke off.

The Swiss army and police joined in the rescue efforts hampered by deep snow.

Rescuers reached the crash area on foot. Survivors were flown out by helicopters.

In Stuttgart, West Germany five persons were killed when a twin-engine aircraft crashed also during a snow storm near that city's Echterdingen airport today.

The aircraft burst into flames after crashing by the side of a busy motorway.

Police said it appeared to encounter difficulties shortly after takeoff for Brussels. The pilot had attempted an emergency landing.

HE LEFT POLICE DUMBFOUNDED

GLASGOW (CPI) — James Burke, 18, spent the weekend in jail awaiting trial on charges of disturbing the peace because, police said, he was "bawling, shouting and screaming" at a soccer match Saturday.

The court dismissed the charge Monday when it learned Burke is deaf and dumb.

SPILL PACT SIGNED BY CANADA, U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A contingency plan for oil spills on the east and west coasts has been reached with the United States, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Davis told reporters after a meeting with Russell Train, chairman of the U.S. president's council on environmental quality, that the agreement extends current provisions for the Great Lakes to coastal waters.

Davis said the coastal oil spill contingency plan involves oil tanker routes, navigational aids to prevent spill disasters and methods of cleaning up spills.

Train said the two groups discussed only the environmental problems of the oil-tanker route. He said he supports President Nixon's preference for the Alaska pipeline and West Coast tanker route over alternative methods of transporting Alaskan oils.

The environment minister said the oil spill contingency plan would apply particularly to the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Georgia Strait.

Envoys Order Families Out

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — Diplomatic sources said today three foreign embassies, faced with dwindling supplies and a threatened Communist attack on Phnom Penh on Friday, have ordered all dependents temporarily out of the capital.

Word of the evacuation came as a U.S. embassy spokesman said Washington had approved an airlift of fuel supplies to ease critical shortages caused by encirclement of the capital by Communist troops.

The sources said the evacuation of the British, Japanese and Israeli embassies will be completed by Friday — the Buddhist new year.

They said the evacuation was prompted not only by security problems, but also because of shortages of fuel, power blackouts and a shrinking water supply.

Military intelligence reports indicate that Communist units now operating within a 15-mile radius of the capital are planning to launch a combined rocket and sapper attack on the capital in celebration of the new year.

The Vietnam truce supervising organization said today it is halting all of its helicopter flights indefinitely, apparently because of a helicopter downed Saturday over territory controlled by Communists.

Nine men, one of them a Canadian died in the crash.

A spokesman read newsmen a one-sentence statement announcing the decision, but did not elaborate on the reasons.

Meanwhile, two Canadian officers crossed the Thach Han River at Quang Tri today to begin an investigation on the crash.

The investigators are expected to spend about two days in the bush in the northwest corner of the country where the Viet Cong maintain armed control.

The Viet Cong have described the crash as an "accident."

Israelis Raid Beirut

Times News Services

Israeli commandos stormed into the heart of Beirut today, killing three top Palestinian guerrilla leaders in their apartment and launching lightning attacks on refugee camps.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam announced the resignation of his government following an emergency cabinet meeting to discuss the pre-dawn attack.

The troops landed on beaches near Beirut, sped into the city in six U.S.-built cars rented earlier by Israeli secret agents, and later escaped by plane and helicopter.

It was the first Israeli strike into the heart of Beirut and the Israeli chief of staff said it was a reprisal raid that struck a "serious blow" to the guerrilla movement.

The Lebanese said the raid showed no one is safe from Israeli aggression.

The troops blasted their way into two apartment buildings in the centre of Beirut with machine guns and killed Kamal Nasser, spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization, and Al Fatah leaders Kamal Adwan and Mohammed Najjar.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir called a special session of parliament in Jerusalem to consider recent Arab guerrilla attacks against the Israelis and a government communique disclosed for the first time. Rome police had foiled an Arab attempt to hijack an El Al airliner there last week.

"It was very marvellous because we killed the murderers who were planning to murder again," she told parliament. "Shining pages will be written about this."

The Israeli guerrillas today also attacked a refugee camp at Sabra which houses 5,000 Palestinians, and said at least 30 persons were killed. Residents were searching the debris of blown-up buildings for more bodies.

One of the buildings attacked was the headquarters of the Maoist Popular Democratic Front.

The raiders went on to the Dikwaneh camp, which houses 8,000 refugees, and blew up a factory, police said. Guerrillas immediately surrounded the area and refused entry to Lebanese authorities.

An army lieutenant in Sidon said the Israelis landed there from the sea and blew up three cars inside the garage of a gas station and an empty shed alongside.

The Israeli chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. David Elazar, said in Tel Aviv that two Israelis were killed in the 2½-hour raid and two were wounded. He warned that Israel may hit Beirut again, saying: "It is impossible to honor the sovereignty of Lebanon and its capital when there is complete freedom for the terrorists, their bases and commands in Lebanese territory."

The guerrilla leadership issued a later statement saying the killing of the three leaders was carried out by agents of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, that it was an inside job and that report of Israeli planes and helicopters were just a coverup.

The Israeli raid came 12 hours after guerrilla attacks in Nicosia which left one Arab dead and three wounded.

In Nicosia today, police were placed on full alert to prevent a recurrence of Monday's violence resulting from the guerrilla attacks.

Prior to the attacks in Cyprus, more than 30 bombs exploded and there was scattered shooting that President Archbishop Makarios blamed on Cypriot extremists.

No More Bargain Gas: Nimsick

B.C. cannot continue to export its natural gas to foreign markets at "bargain basement prices" when there is only 10 years supply left, Mines Minister and Petroleum Resources minister Leo Nimsick said today.

Nimsick announced that he has arranged a special meeting with officials of the National Energy Board to express the NDP government's concern about the low price and high quality of natural gas being exported.

The meeting will take place Friday in Ottawa, where Nimsick will be attending a federal conference of mines ministers.

Nimsick said he is "deeply concerned" about the state of natural gas reserves left in the province. Natural gas supplies will last no longer than 1983 he said, "a mere 10 years."

The minister added that even if the historical rate of natural gas discoveries is taken into account, "there will not be sufficient supplies to meet domestic and export demands beyond 1989."

"We are facing the very grim picture of running out of gas in less than 20 years, while we continue to deliver this non-replenishable resource to the United States at rates that amount to a give-away," he said.

Nimsick blamed the situation on a "lack of foresight" by the former Social Credit government and lack of action on the part of federal authorities such as the National Energy Board.

Nimsick said present NEB regulations provide that the export price of natural gas cannot be set at less than 105 per cent of the domestic price being charged.

"Instead of using this level as a floor, the NEB has been using it as a ceiling when the level should have been no less than 150 per cent," he said.

"We cannot support continued gas exports at current terms, when today's proved resources will be used up in 10 years."

Nimsick criticized a special rate on natural gas being given to El Paso Natural Gas, an American customer of B.C.'s Westcoast Transmission. The price charged for B.C.'s gas should reflect rising prices at B.C. and other North American wellheads, he said.

The minister added that all gas exports should be permitted only where future domestic needs are satisfactorily met.

He said B.C. residents in the Kootenays are in danger of becoming victims to the proposed two-price policy being considered by Alberta. B.C.'s domestic consumers are already paying twice the price for natural gas that Albertans have to pay, he said.

"British Columbians will become foreigners from the point of view of Alberta's Conservative government," he said.

Nimsick termed the B.C. government's position on additional exports of natural gas according to present proposed terms as one of "solid opposition."

Eerie Crypt Picasso Choice

VAUVENARGUES, France (UPI) — Pablo Picasso was laid to rest today on a snow-swept hilltop in a 16th Century chapel crypt which a villager said was "full of mystery and old skeletons."

The crypt was part of the isolated Chateau of Vauvenargues, in southern France, which the Spanish painter bought in 1958 for $120,000.

He visited it only once or twice, apparently because he was refused the title of "Marquis" which he thought he would acquire from its builder, the Marquis de Vauvenergue.

But, true to his non-conforming life, Picasso asked to be buried there.

Inside the chapel are bones said to belong to Saint Severin and the skeletons of hapless victims of the dungeon.

Local people said Picasso's body eventually may be transferred to a grave in the chateu grounds, now covered with snow.

Picasso, 91, died Sunday of heart failure following congestion of the lungs.

Only his widow, Jacqueline, 46, his son, Paolo, and a few relatives from Spain were present when the body of the artist was brought 60 miles from his villa at Mougins and placed in the stone crypt.

There was no religious funeral. Picasso was an avowed Communist and the village priest was not invited to the interment.

A villager, Louis Nikolai, said he thought Picasso chose the Vauvenargues crypt for burial "because it is full of mystery and old skeletons."

There is no altar in the chapel.

Man Breaks Limbs

A 22-year-old man fractured both legs and arms in an early morning car crash in Saanich today.

Police said John Bruce Reid, 22, of 206-3255 Cook, lost control on a curve in the 3200-block Maplewood and collided with an oak tree at 12:20 a.m.

His '62 Chrysler was demolished and Reid is in fair condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

In Oak Bay a 53-year-old man was taken to Royal Jubilee following a morning rush hour collision wich caused $2,800 damage.

Patrick W. Nasmyth, 2600 Queenswood, suffered abrasions to his arms, legs and head. He is reported in good condition today.

Police said Nasmyth, travelling south on Foul Bay Road, collided with a 1966 Barracuda driven by David A. S. Kipp, 19, of 2406 Cedar Hill, who was going east on Haultain.

Damage was estimated at $1,600 to Nasmyth's 1970 Simca and $1,200 to Kipp's car. Kipp was uninjured.

Dangerous Navigation Charged to Skippers

The captains of two vessels, one of them a B.C. ferry, have been charged by the federal transport ministry following an alleged near collision in Howe Sound Feb. 19.

A ministry spokesman said today the skippers involved are Capt. Jonathan Oswald Auclair, 57, of Squamish, master of the B.C. ferry Garibaldi II, and Capt. James Joseph Walsh of Dublin, Ireland, master of the freighter Irish Star.

The ferry, carrying 47 passengers and a crew of five, was eastbound from Woodfire to Darrell Bay when it reportedly was involved in the near miss with the northbound freighter about midway across the four-mile run.

The information in the charges states in part that both masters operated a vessel on the internal waters of Canada "in a manner that was dangerous to navigation, life or limb, having regard to all the circumstances . . ."

The informations were submitted by J. W. Ickringill, senior marine surveyor with the ministry of transport, to Judge C. I. Walker of the provincial court in Squamish.

There is no indication of when the charges may come to court. Capt. Walsh is understood to be still at sea.

Under the summary section of the Criminal Code, penalty on conviction can range from a fine up to two years in prison.

Venue Change Hearing Soon

An application for a B.C. Supreme Court order to have a non-capital murder charge against Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, 28, heard outside Victoria is expected to be made this week.

Hotvedt was charged with the fatal stabbing Nov. 5 of his wife Linda, 28, in her apartment at 1255 Balmoral.

After four days of testimony which began in Victoria Jan. 8, a Supreme Court jury was unable to reach a verdict and Mr. Justice Douglas E. Andrews ordered a new trial.

Opposition Raps Turner On Bank Bid

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner came under heavy fire in the Commons from the opposition Monday for allowing the Bank of Canada to boost the bank rate but he defended the move as "expansionary."

Opposition spokesman were alarmed that the central bank's weekend move raising the rate by one half per cent was aimed at curbing jobs and restricting the economy.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, said he hoped Turner did not accept the "gobbledegook" in the statement issued by the Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey.

"The governor says on the one hand that he is going to have an expansionary policy and on the other hand does something that prevents an expansionary policy," said Lewis.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) asked the minister how he could reconcile a "deflationary step" such as raising the bank rate with his claims of an expansionary budget and economy.

Lewis said increasing the bank rate in the past has often been a prelude to continuing similar action which affected mortgages as well as bank loans. These moves reduced the monetary supply and affected the expansion of the economy.

He sought assurances from Turner that he will not agree to any further increases in interest rates that would affect the economy as seriously as the latest bank rate increases would affect it.

Turner said he could not give such assurances.

The major chartered banks have all raised their prime lending rate.

In addition, the banks also said they are increasing the rate of interest paid on savings and chequing-savings accounts.

The banks said, effective immediately, they are increasing their prime rates by one-half of one per cent to 6½ per cent.

However, none of the banks increased the rate of interest charged on personal consumer loans.

In addition, the banks said they are increasing the rate of interest paid on savings accounts by one-half of one per cent to 4½ per cent, retroactive to April 1. Interest paid on chequing-savings accounts will be increased to three per cent, from 2¾ per cent on May 1.

. . . PARKS

The marine park program is timely in the light of a federal task force study made two years ago on the recreational potential of B.C.'s inland waters.

The report warned that by 1980 Canadian boatmen would be crowded out of their own waters by heavy influxes of U.S. boatmen unless more harbor and marine facilities are provided on the islands.

75,000 BOATS

There are about 75,000 registered boats operating in the Strait of Georgia. This is expected to increase by seven per cent this year.

According to park officials boating is the fastest growing type of recreation.

FLYING NAIL KILLS WOMAN IN HOSPITAL

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A three-inch, power-driven nail flew through a hospital wall Monday and killed a dietitian as she sat at her desk.

Police said the nail, driven by a workman's high-powered tool, struck Mrs. Justine S. Harrison, 54, in the chest, came out through her shoulder and flew over the head of a co-worker.

Mrs. Harrison died in the emergency room of the Bayfront Medical Centre.

A hospital spokesman said the workman had been driving nails into solid masonry, but the point at which the accident happened formerly held a door. The door had been wallpapered and it was impossible to tell there was no masonry at that point.

Crisis Claimed By Island Group

A delegation of Lasqueti Island residents told municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer today that their island was facing "an ecological crisis" because of proposed major development.

Appearing before the special municipal affairs committee, Arni Porter, spokesman for the Lasqueti Community Association said residents were concerned about the water scarcity, garbage and sewage problems that would be created by construction of four developments planned for the island in the Strait of Georgia near Parksville.

He said the population had risen from 75 to 150 in the past three years and would double again within another three years.

The delegation was concerned about Summer Haven, a development on a waterfront area of the island, which lies across from Parksville.

STUDIES URGED

Porter told the committee that the development was owned by Springbay Development, a Seattle corporation, and asked that work be ordered stopped until adequate ecological studies could be carried out.

Lorimer said this was impossible because permission to go ahead had been given in 1972.

LCS chairman John Cantwell said the residents were frustrated because they had no representative on the Powell River Regional District to which the Island belongs.

He said Ted Fox, who represented both Texada and Lasquiti islands, had never been to Lasquiti.

'THORN IN SIDE'

"It's a big thorn in our sides that we have no voice at regional meetings," he said. "We want some control of our own destiny and we have none right now."

Cartwell said the LCA was concerned because one developer had told them he was planning strata title construction and this would allow him to avoid the provincial government's 10-acre land freeze regulation.

Lorimer reminded the group that such development would still have to have approval from regional districts.

He assured the delegation that the committee would be making tours of the Gulf Islands, holding informal interviews with residents and public hearings.

New Centre Opening By Governor May 1

Formal opening of Cedar Hill Community Centre is scheduled for 8 p.m. May 1 by Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

The last project in a five-year capital program launched by Saanich in 1967, the $300,000 centre will serve the Victoria-Saanich community of Cedar Hill-Doncaster-Quadra with a centre for indoor games, dancing, meetings, hobbies and stage performances.

It has change rooms accessible to playing fields and a convertible wall on the north side emabling the stage to serve as an amphitheatre.

Small conventions may be accommodated on the main 82-by 55-foot floor.

Last year's construction tieup delayed the scheduled opening last fall.

The clouds from the frontal system near the coast continue to behave in an erratic fashion along the southern B.C. coast. While clouds and occasional rain prevail over the northern coast the clouds over the south coastal areas have a tendency to increase or decrease in an irregular way. The clouds should gradually thicken along the south coast as the front continues to edge slowly eastward.

In the next ten years you'll pay about $180 too much to heat your water with oil.

(That's if oil prices don't go up. Again.)

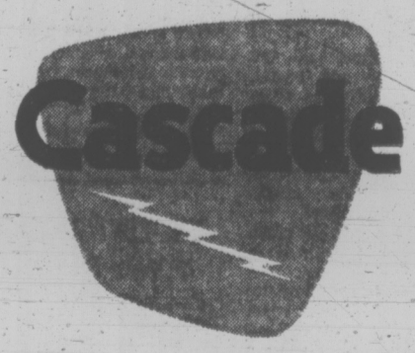
Or, you can switch to a Cascade electric water heater. First of all, you'll get all the hot water you need. Silently. Dependably. You won't have to fret about fuel delivery. Nor will you have reason to worry about environmental damage. Electricity is clean.

Best of all, on Vancouver Island it's the most economical way to heat water automatically. Compared to oil-fired units, the total cost of a Cascade electric water heater works out to approximately $18.00 less a year.* (In some areas you could save over $21.00 a year.*)

If you think $4.13 a month to rent an oil-fired water heater sounds pretty reasonable, consider this: you'll pay only $1.16 a month to own a Cascade, over the next ten years.* And that's more than reasonable.

Last of all, every Cascade unit carries a ten-year guarantee on the tank. If you wish, convenient financing can be arranged through B.C. Hydro. No matter how you add it all up, you get a lot more than hot water when you switch to Cascade.

*Based on operating conditions and calculations detailed in B.C. Hydro Technical Bulletin CWH 1-73, available at all B.C. Hydro offices.



All the more reason to switch:

Cascade 60 now $50 off! Reg. retail price.

This offer available through the following dealers until August 31, 1973 and is available on the replacement of a water heater in a residential home only.

Nixon Push On Tariffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon formally asked Congress today to give him broad new powers to raise, reduce or remove tariff barriers as a lever in upcoming world trade negotiations.

Nixon asked for expanded authority to retaliate against unfair trade practices, including authority for the government to ban some imports.

He also sought authority to extend most-favored-nation (MFN) treatment without advance congressional approval.

He made it clear he wanted to grant MFN status to the Soviet Union.

Contending that the need for trade reform is urgent, Nixon urged prompt congressional action "So that we can move our country and our world away from trade confrontation and toward trade negotiation . . ."

Trade laws have not been overhauled for more than a decade, he said in petitioning Congress to "delegate significant new negotiating authorities to the executive branch" of government.

Without the broad new powers, Nixon said, U.S. negotiators "will be badly hampered" in negotiations beginning in September with European countries, Japan and other trading partners.

SPRINGTIME in Montreal means just another walloping from the weatherman, and snowdrifts instead of snowdrops in the gardens. A wild blizzard roaring out of the U.S. Midwest dumped four inches of snow on the streets of Canada's largest city today making walking difficult and driving hazardous.

CROWDED CLASSES SHUFFLED

More re-shuffling to ease crowded classrooms in North Saanich was approved by Saanich school board Monday night.

Grades 5 and 6 from McTavish Elementary School will be transferred to Sansbury Elementary next September, leaving the four-room McTavish school with only grades one to four.

All Grade 7 students from the north end of the Saanich Peninsula will be attending North Saanich Intermediate School next September in conjunction with the new Parklands Senior Secondary which will house all high school students.

Board chairman Rubymay Parrott says the grade transfer will mean population at McTavish will be reduced to 84 students from 156 students now crowded into the small building.

"It means the Grade 5 and 6 students will have a better opportunity for music, drama and art programs," she said.

In other business the board decided to hold a special committee meeting with the city of Sidney to discuss contract bids for construction of sewers at the new Parklands school.

"The first bids were all extremely high," said Parrott, "ranging from $65,500 to $97,109."

A new lower bid of $55,000 was submitted to the board Monday night but the cost is "still astronomical," she said.

The chairman said they hope Sidney will be able to "come up with a more reasonable solution."

High cost of construction stems from the need for the school to connect with the Sidney sewer system at a point about one-quarter of a mile away.

The board also approved, for submission to the department of education, a locally-developed Political Science 12 course for Claremont Senior Secondary School.

Parrott said the course is "somewhat different" from the controversial Political Science 12 course at Oak Bay High School, which finally won departmental approval last month.

The Claremont course, she said, proposes to do comparative studies of political philosophies around the world.

Union Says Fisheries Exploit Female Labor

Changes in the Labor Relations Act to end discrimination against women in union contracts are long overdue, a spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) said today.

Women in the fisheries industry are exploited as cheap labor, said George Hewison of Vancouver, business agent for the union.

Hewison was responding to a statement by deputy labor minister Bill Sands that a technical change in the Labor Relations Act is under study that would close the loophole allowing open discrimination against women in union contracts.

Such a change, if instituted, would make null and void collective agreements currently in force which provide women with lower pay scales than men for the same jobs, said Sands.

"This would certainly be a step forward," said Hewison. The UFAWU has for years been trying to get equal pay for women, he said.

The agreement between the UFAWU and the Fisheries Association of British Columbia gives a base rate for female fresh fish workers of $2.89 an hour and for male fresh fish workers of $3.87 an hour. The skilled rate for female workers is $3.16, for male workers $4.19.

"What we want to see is they (women) are not exploited to the extent they are now," Hewison said.

The existing Labor Relations Act states that any agreement contrary to the Fair Employment Practices Act could not be deemed a collective agreement.

The Fair Employment Practices Act was repealed in 1969 and the Human Rights Act, which forbids discrimination on the grounds of sex, was enacted. However, the Labor Relations Act has never been changed to refer to the new act, so it continues to refer to the Fair Employment Practices Act.

Among other B.C. agreements which give different pay scales for women is one between the Retail Food and Drug Clerks Union, Local 1518, and Canada Safeway Ltd. Under the agreement, male full-time clerks are paid $4.85 an hour and female full-time clerks $4.30 an hour.

Rudy Kricken, president of the clerks union, denied today that changes to the Labor Relations Act would affect his union.

"It won't affect us at all because ours is based on work content," Kricken said. Even though they are both called clerks, men and women have different job duties which justify the different pay rates, he said.

Statistics from the labor department show that only five per cent of collective agreements in the province have special provisions ensuring equal pay for women for equal work.

The change regarding women is only one of many in labor legislation currently under study, said Sands.

Walkway Plan Changed

The pedestrian walkway under construction beneath the causeway in Victoria's Inner Harbor has undergone a change in plans to bring it in line with architect Arthur Erickson's ideas for an Inner Harbor master plan.

Instead of being a plain walkway, the project will now include a bank of trees along the causeway wall, their tops designed to reach only a few feet over the wall so as not to obstruct the Inner Harbor views.

'Not Enough Thought' In Ambulance Plan

Spokesmen for Garden City Ambulance employees say the city and Victoria General Hospital "just don't know anything about what they're doing" in setting up a new ambulance service for Victoria.

Ed Pheifle, one of nine employees of the firm, said Monday the city "had not bothered to consult the Victoria ad-hoc ambulance committee or anybody knowledgeable in the ambulance field."

He said the employees are not opposed to the idea of hospital based ambulance services but object to "dual-staffing of this vital service."

Pheifle says his colleagues feel not enough thought was given to the city plan, announced last week, which would see a new emergency ambulance service set up July 1 and operated out of Victoria General Hospital with the city footing the bill.

The new scheme is viewed as an interim measure until a regional ambulance service can be set up and will replace the Garden City contract with the city which expires June 30.

In a brief presented Monday to Percy Frampton, chairman of city council's health committee, the Garden City employees say the city plan to have only one ambulance in service is impractical.

The brief says emergency calls can come simultaneously, the ambulance can break down or be in an accident and many other problems can arise with only one vehicle.

Use of other municipalities' emergency vehicles as a back-up force will not work, they say, because "the taxpayers of these municipalities are certainly not going to stand for their ambulances leaving their communities unprotected to respond to calls in another community."

The brief suggests that a separate "completely city-subsidized service" similar to that operated by Metropolitan Ambulance Service in Vancouver would be a better alternative.

The employees are concerned that the new service will mean half the Garden City staff will lose their jobs as the firm becomes purely a private concern.

PRIORITY

John Murray, assistant executive-director of Victoria General Hospital says they will hire nine people to man the one ambulance, but first priority must be given to orderlies already employed by the hospital.

"If nine orderlies apply for the job then we'll still need nine new orderlies," Murray said. "But the Garden City men will have just as good a chance as anybody else on the outside, for either job."

Reaching the Limit

The loss of a helicopter of the International Commission of Control and Supervision through Vietcong missile fire was a tragic occurrence for those — including one Canadian officer — who were killed. It was a disgraceful act of irresponsible banditry by the Vietcong, as was their refusal for many hours to permit rescue teams and investigating officers to visit the site. Reported efforts of the Vietcong to make surviving ICCS officers sign documents to the effect that the Vietcong were not at fault only add to the condemnation.

The fact that two Vietcong commission members were killed in the crash increases wonder as to just what type of force the Vietcong are fielding during the so-called truce signed by their representatives at Paris. The downed helicopter, and the second one which landed under fire, were distinctively marked and their presence in the area was fully announced.

The incident, of course, brings to a focus the question of Canada's continued participation in the work of the Commission. As External Affairs Minister Sharp has said, if the situation "does not improve very substantially, it will be clear that by continuing to serve in the ICCS we would be staying on to observe, not a peace, not a ceasefire, but a continuing war."

Not only would that be the case, rendering the job a farce, but the continued presence of Canada and the other ICCS members would give some international standing to the phony peace situation. All who are making a mockery of the Paris agreement could point to the ICCS and claim — however much with tongue in cheek — that things were under control by the international body and that the truce was being kept.

Mr. Sharp has been continuing the Canadian participation on a tentative basis, with June 30 as the present termination date if it is not extended. If the ceasefire situation further deteriorates, if the ICCS teams are further prevented from doing the investigatory and supervisory job which is their sole reason for being in Vietnam, then the Canadian contingent should be withdrawn without delay.

The team went in under certain definite conditions. Its efforts have been frustrated by some of its colleagues on the ICCS and by Vietcong authorities in the field. Now a Canadian officer has been killed and others endangered by an act of war. Unless the signatory powers are willing now to reaffirm their intention of adhering to the Paris agreement and guaranteeing effective compliance, then there is no point in Canada acting out a useless charade.

If this tragic occurrence does not result in an effective new deal for the peace-keeping, that should be sufficient answer for Canada. We should not allow ourselves to be trapped into a succession of "one more times."

Pablo Picasso

If a man is the sum of what he has done, then Pablo Picasso is not dead, nor will he be for many a year — perhaps many a century. So much of what he produced is scattered across the world, in homes, galleries, museums and public places; so much of what he considered to be his best work still lies stacked in store rooms waiting to be released to the public; that for all but his intimates the tough, wizened little Spaniard will continue in effect to be alive, still producing his apparently effortless masterpieces, still creating new concepts in old media, still leading his era in the mastery of form, color, light, composition and insight.

It will be appropriate if the world in the future venerates Picasso on the anniversary of his birth rather than of his death, for his birth began almost ninety years of creative production which his death, for all who in time to come will discover anew the fruits of his genius, could not halt.

Like most of history's outstanding men of ability, Picasso had the incredible industry through which to give it full expression. His thousands of paintings, drawings, etchings, ceramics, collages, sculptures, representing various periods of his creative life, are testimony to the driving force which sustained him from his early teens until last Sunday, when he died in his ninety-second year, still enjoying the company of his friends, still working in his studio.

He was a man who drank life to the lees, and called for more. He developed concepts of perception and analysis which put him in the forefront of his world, and had the courage to manifest his leadership in a steady flow of artistic production which the world at first derided and then recognized as the guide-posts to a new era.

As few other men have done, he spanned the centuries from the ancient classical to the age of astronauts and scientific magic. He saw the world with new eyes and shared his discovery generously with mankind. History will remember him; giants are so few.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Teaching Issues

Subject: Mr. Boddy's letter titled "Straight Case" which appeared in the April 2 Times.

Mr. Boddy stated, "I fail to see that your headline was in any way biased reporting." This failure "to see" was precisely the whole point of my first reply — an attempt to enlighten by citing some of my duties as a teacher. It is obvious from Mr. Boddy's reply that he still does not understand the real nature and issues involved in teaching today.

This is understandable as many people do not really comprehend the breadth of other occupations. However, one would do well to form generalizations based upon sufficient knowledge.

After having spent 12 years in the civil service myself (forestry and engineering), the challenge of being a classroom teacher exceeds my original duties considerably. — K. W. Robertson, 1700 Mortimer St.

Appalled

I was appalled at the report in your issue of March 28 which said that a member of the Greater Victoria Public Library Board never uses a library.

Mr. Zachary Hamilton is a very fortunate man if he can afford to buy every book that interests him. I can only hope that he will be replaced in the very near future by someone who is interested in the needs of the vast reading public, of modest means, of the Greater Victoria area. — C. M. Baker, 1269 Mackenzie Ave.

Casual But Effective

I continue to enjoy Art Mayse and his column in the Times. His item on "neighboring" was representative of his easual but most effective style. The piece actually brought a sudden suspicion of a lump in my throat — just a small thing, mind you — and this came about either because it was most telling with its message, or else I am getting a little sentimental with passing years, I think the former. Thanks for a good paper. — Bill Ward, Editor, 752 Monterey Ave.

'The Audience Enjoyed It'

I have never, in my lifetime, written a letter of protest to a newspaper, but I feel I must speak out against Audrey Johnson's unusual criticism of the Victoria Operatic Society's production of the Merry Widow.

Although constructive criticism is very necessary and welcome in a production such as this, I personally feel that literally attacking Merry Widow, and other productions in the past, is totally unwarranted. One would obtain the impression that Audrey Johnson is not acting as a true critic working towards the best interests of the public theatregoers. One would however, obtain the impression that she is undermining any attempts of the Victoria Operatic Society to bring live theatre entertainment to Victorians.

I would like to remind Audrey Johnson that the majority of people involved in a production such as the Merry Widow are for the most part amateurs and many of them appearing on stage for the first time. The amount of effort put into a production such as this by directors, producers, stage crews, musical directors, etc., for the benefit of theatre goers should not go unmentioned. Absenteeism from rehearsals because of conflicts with one's livelihood or from sickness, not to mention the difficult, sometimes monotonous work after a long day at the office, are just some of the tasks facing the directors and cast. It might be pointed out that all of this is done voluntarily in the spirit of producing a good and entertaining show.

Opening night jitters to professionals is a nightmare, as many have testified. You can imagine what it can do to the amateurs, particularly those appearing for the first time. Despite whatever drawbacks occurred, the audience enjoyed the opening night performance as indicated in their applause throughout the show.

I understand that Audrey Johnson did not even have the courtesy to remain for the entire production and should this be true, then she obviously missed the best part of the evening. The show started off slowly and mistakes were made, opening nights are like that, but the cast made the best of it and the audience showed their appreciation. However, the show grew stronger and stronger during the second and third acts as the cast gained confidence.

As a member of the chorus in the Merry Widow it is naturally difficult for me to remain unbiased after reading Audrey Johnson's column. However, I have been connected with the theatre in one way or another since 1955 and I pride myself on fairness. In all fairness to everyone connected with the Merry Widow I believe Audrey Johnson's column to be mostly out of tune with the actual events that took place on opening night. In fairness to Audrey Johnson I would like to ask her how it is possible for her to criticize the Merry Widow production so strongly if she did not remain to see the entire production.

This letter is for publication and the views stated herein are strictly those of the author and are not necessarily the opinion of the Victoria Operatic Society. — Wilfred B. Leduc, 410-925 Esquimalt Rd.

(Editor's note — Mrs. Johnson is a critic and interprets her job as calling for professional criticism rather than easy hometown praise. When a stage company plays before the public and charges for the entertainment it invites candid criticism, which may be favorable or unfavorable. Many local directors and performers have been grateful for an impartial assessment of their production and have benefited from it. In the case of the Merry Widow, Mrs. Johnson's departure before the show was finished was not a discourtesy but recognition of the need to get her work completed the same evening, and it did not invalidate her comments.)

The Year of Cheap Steaks

CALGARY: As always happens in such games, the national charade over food prices is characterized by a general refusal to call a spade a spade. Even the most articulate boycotting housewives are leaning over backwards to exempt farmers and ranchers from blame for high-level food prices.

Great care is taken by all sides to avoid recognizing what sky-rocketing livestock prices, never-ending wage increases, whopping expansion of government spending, and rising profits and profit-margins contribute to high prices. Meanwhile, the cattlemen are laughing all the way to the bank.

Meat-on-the-hoof prices have gone beyond all reason. Two years ago, in the heart of this cattle country, it would have been impossible to find a rancher who would admit expecting to live long enough to see market steers bring 50 cents a pound at the packers.

Nor would it have been possible, a year ago, to locate many grain farmers who ever expected to see their $1.60 wheat go to $2.65 a bushel and 60 cent feed oats sell for $1.20.

Down the Line

There is no question that such high prices have triggered increases in retail food prices all along the line. It is all, as Adam Smith would have shouted in triumph, a product of supply and demand. And taste — the irresistible human urge of a high-paid labor force to eat prime cuts of red meat.

High wages on all sides have created an unprecedented demand here and in the United States for meat that has got into short supply. That demand is a product of a steady escalation in wage rates.

The cause-and-effect relationship between wages and prices has been obscured by the fact that food prices have risen spectacularly over the past year while wage rates have been going up slowly but steadily over many years Wages, over the last 25 years, have far outstripped fair prices.

In 1948 wheat was selling at $1.60 a bushel, or precisely what it was selling for last year before the huge demand developed. If we retreat to 1972, we find that wheat remained unchanged over a quarter of a century. During that time wages in the construction industry, a handy bellwether, have increased by 400 per cent, from roughly $1.40 an hour in the west for skilled trades to $6.75 to $7.50 an hour.

Even wages for unskilled workers have soared, from 50-70 cents to $3.25 to $4.00. Back in 1948, choice steers were selling at 15 cents a pound on the Calgary market and until two years ago a price of 30 cents a pound was considered a bonanza. In 1948, Sirloin steak was selling for 52 cents a pound in Calgary. Last year the price of steers got to 35 cents, a gain of 150 per cent over 1948. Sirloin steak, selling then for $1.50-$1.60 was up over 200 per cent.

To work the numbers around to a formula agricultural economists love, an hour's work by a skilled construction worker in 1948 would buy almost three pounds of sirloin steak. And even at today's prices, it will still do a little better than that.

Spokesmen for the ranch fraternity, who have never previously cared much for public opinion, have been pleading not guilty to causing the zoom in beef prices. They point to high coarse-grain prices, higher labor costs, higher machinery costs, etc. as important factors in the price.

Irresistible Urge

Feed-lot operators who finish the cattle may have been squeezed a bit with the doubling of oats and barley prices. But they have also gained substantially on the 10 cent rise that has taken place since they bought their steers.

Nobody need waste much sympathy on the rest of the cattle trade. George Ross, one of Alberta's toughest and most successful ranchers, coined a phrase that could be the slogan of the ranching business. It was, never come home with a loaded truck. In other words, a successful rancher raised all the grain and hay he needed and bought it only in an emergency. As western grain farmers know, nobody drives a harder bargain than a rancher buying hay or grain.

In Manitoba and Saskatchewan, the Federal Government has been subsidizing the beef producers to the extent of $1 million a year. It operates a string of community pastures on which 7,000 livestock owners have been running upwards of 150,000 head of beef cattle for nominal fees that have failed to pay government expenses.

In Alberta and Saskatchewan, ranchers have vast areas of Crown land under long-term leases at a few pennies per acre. They can also run their cattle in forestry reserves at nominal fees.

In summary, the big red meat crisis turns out to be one in which neither side has much cause for complaint. For the consumers, the beef boycott could well be people working out their frustrations over not being able to eat their cake and have it too. Prices take the gloss off the wage increases as quickly as they are obtained.

A Calgary plasterer celebrates getting his pay up to $7 an hour by taking his car in for a spring tune-up. He walks out fuming over being charged $22 for labor to install $14.50 worth of plugs and points. He discovers that to pay the unions' 8 per cent pay increase, the house builders have upped the price of the house he was saving to buy by a good 10 per cent from last year.

No Exceptions

The workpants he paid $6 for last year are up to $8.29 this year. The dress slacks that he paid $15 for are now selling for $30. A hat he expected to buy for $5.95 is priced at $18.50.

Twenty years ago $7,500 would buy a livable three-bedroom house with a five per cent mortgage. Today the price is $25,000 and the mortgage rate a fancy 8½ per cent. As he lights a cigarette he reflects that they cost twice as much as when he started to smoke.

Then, as his mood darkens, his wife emerges from the supermarket with a cart full of pre-cut, processed and prepackaged foods with the word that if he wants a roast for the weekend she needs another $5.

As that straw is breaking this camel's back the car radio blares the news that the west faces a crop failure in 1973 unless the spring rains come soon and in cloud-burst proportions. If that happens, the meat counter boycotters may well find that, comes the spring of 1974 in Canada, they can look back on 1973 as the year of cheap steaks and chops.

'I Would Be Happy to Explain My Views'

In the Thursday, March 29, Times a letter signed with the pseudonym Kim Mason takes me to task for statements supposedly made in an interview a couple of weeks ago with Times reporter, Linda Hughes. Miss Hughes did an excellent job of outlining my general educational philosophy, but it was just that — a philosophical discussion. How it became an attack on the teachers of the Saanich school district is beyond my comprehension.

There were in the article some misquotes and misinterpretations which, I suppose, were unavoidable under the circumstances of the interview. For example, I said "that education was too important to leave only to teachers" — not that education was too important to leave to teachers. A reference to the British Navy was "that routine, structure and discipline can serve the individual well, particlarly in times of stress" — not that we have naval discipline in our schools. I said "that learning is hard work but need not be dull or unrewarding" — not that learning is drudgery.

I would mention too that where the words "teachers" or "educators" were used, it was my intention to always qualify the generalization with the word "some." Much of my criticism was directed at the B.C. Teachers' Federation policies and consequently at those who strongly espouse such policies.

Mr. Adam Robertson, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, stated recently that the federation is a house divided for whose future he has grave concern. He is, I believe, referring to the radical wing who seek to control education absolutely thus shutting out the views and wishes of the public and their elected representatives. As far as I am concerned, during the last few years the B.C. Teachers' Federation has become a militant union and is no longer a dedicated professional association.

I am well aware that these selfish views are not shared by a great many teachers who are dedicated, hard working individuals who find themselves alienated from their own association. I would assure them that I am not anti-teacher. My background is very much educational, my father having taught at Victoria High School for 35 years. I just want a sane, sensible, practical education for all our children.

I do not wonder that this "Kim Mason" used a pseudonym because the letter was full of distortions. It is quite untrue that the article mentioned the word "lazy" or for that matter the words "limited and narrow" with regard to teachers.

It is also untrue that the board asked me to explain my remarks. I have no idea to what extent that new board supports my views. The silence, however, should not be interpreted as support, as the matter was never discussed by the board.

I would like to point out to Kim Mason that a trustee's main responsibility is not to teachers — important as that may be, but to the electors and the children of the school district. I believe it is my duty to express my personal opinions when I feel it is necessary.

I would be happy to explain my views in greater depth to Kim Mason, whoever this individual may be, or for that matter to any interested group.

I would like to thank those who have supported my views by letters to the press or who have written or telephoned me personally. Your support at this particular time is greatly valued. — Jack Armstrong, Trustee, School District No. 63 (Saanich).

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of April 10, 1913:

OTTAWA — Sir Wilfrid Laurier obtained an opportunity to speak in the House of Commons last night despite disorderly scenes and government efforts to hurry the closure motion to a finish. Sir Wilfrid roused his followers to a high pitch of enthusiasm when he declared he would rather stand defeated in opposition than be in office by power of gag rule. The Liberals rose and cheered so persistently that the Speaker had to ask them to preserve order in the House. The day of reckoning would come as soon as there was a dissolution, he said. If obstruction was the murder of parliamentary government, then the murderers were on the government side of the House.

Picking Up the Pieces in Shattered Land

By GAVIN YOUNG
London Observer

SAIGON — At last the great American khaki wave has trickled away. The uncouth, hairy horde, so loud, so short on dignity, has vanished like another age. Lilliput — the small, beautiful, quicksilver world of Vietnam — has re-emerged. Poorer, grubbier but too old to be deeply changed.

No one who loves Vietnam more than some political dogma should feel less than joy now. The cease-fire may not be perfect, but a holocaust has been halted. Normal life seeps painfully back like feelings returning to a damaged limb. At last you can travel. Touch wood, even the government's lyrical tourist posters, once so grotesquely inappropriate ("Big game hunting at Dalat", "Yachting at Nha Trang") may be valid fairly soon.

In a Saigon drawing-room a European wife said to me, "I hear the VC are quite friendly." She spoke tentatively, like someone confiding a belief in ghosts. But at last, indeed, you can meet the Vietcong.

I had waited eight years to meet the armed Vietcong with a bullet-shattered arm and the grave face of a worker priest who the other day walked across a field and shook my hand. To get to him there was first a drive from Saigon. Then a walk, led by villagers, across flat, hedgeless, cultivated land. Here, people work in mollusc hats in bean and melon fields. A boy passes carrying two rats in a cage. Buffalo-cars creak through the dust and an old man says: "Walk in the cart tracks in case of mines."

Salvo of Shells

In the shadow between government and Vietcong territory, a solitary reed stands up in the dust path. It has a message tied to it, like an arrow in Red Indian country: "Soldiers, let us put aside vengeance. We need reconstruction now, and friendship." A little further on another one in childish peasant scrawl: "Soldiers, please do not shoot at us and frighten our animals."

As we read, a salvo of heavy mortar shells crashes out from an army post we can see silhouetted on the road. We duck, but the shells whirr overhead and explode a few kilometres beyond. Peasants crowd round to complain of frequent Army harassing fire designed to keep the Vietcong out, even though this is one of the few zones in South Vietnam permitted, in theory, to the Vietcong.

The Vietcong arrive silently; six men in single file, in dark green uniforms guns balanced on shoulders. Their officer gives me a thin priestly smile. He wears sandals, a black and white check scarf and a pistol slung round his neck. He shakes hands. The others grin. They look in their late twenties. I ask the youngest what his medal is for. "For killing 12 Americans", he says.

Their leader has been in the National Liberation Front for 17 years. Captured in 1958 he did eight years in prison. He has been three times wounded. He was once a primary schoolteacher.

"The Army makes sweeps through here regularly," he says. "When they come in we move out. Then we come back. The Army drops tracts to us telling us to respect the Paris agreement. But we don't attack. Here we are politically strong. Trouble only comes when the government tries to extend its area." It is obvious that here and elsewhere government control is formidable — where most of the people are.

Even so, he seems quite optimistic. He speaks of "President Thieu's indiscipline" and "truce violations", but adds: "Some soldiers are less hostile than others. If we can stick this period out perhaps conciliation will grow." That remark means hope.

(Peace takes getting used to, like war. In some areas Vietcong have started the shooting: helicopters have been brought down. Later, I met a government district chief who said: "Drink tea with the Vietcong? My orders from Saigon say no fraternization. If the VC come here I shoot them." But others are less inflexible.)

As we talked the gunfire swelled. Finally riflefire came from a nearby field. Too near. The Vietcong moved silently away.

We plow back to the government-held village on the road, and sit sweating at a tiny stall where two girls sell soft drinks. A policeman, sipping Coke, points to the countryside we have just left and says: "Don't go out there. Very dangerous. Beaucoup VC."

In Saigon President Thieu's wife is opening a new hospital. We stand in heavy heat, journalists, diplomats, Vietnamese ministers, their wives, Vietnam's heavy brigade. A band plays In a Monastery Garden, with an exaggeration of tubas. Soldiers, ordinary people, stare at the great slab of steel and cement from across a street.

An hour late, the President arrives, dapper, relentlessly smiling. His helicopter swoops down on to the roof of the hospital, its air stream throwing up a small tornado of dust, paper bags, cigarette packets. After Madame Thieu's careful speech, the solemn crowd jostle damply into the building. Behind it security guards step on journalists' feet to keep them out.

Official Myopia

Various foreign governments are said to have given money for the hospital. Diplomats had an impression it was for the Vietnamese-in-the-street. They come out baffled. "There seems to be only one public ward. All the rest are large private rooms. Damned if I know who can afford it or who will staff it," someone in the British Embassy says. Is there a serum against official myopia?

Up in Hue, in the American military compound, the few remaining GIs sit around their makeshift air-conditioned bar drinking up the remaining eases of liquor. Prices are special — five cents for a Scotch. No-one has anything to do. There is no possible way for these men to be drawn back into battle here.

A tawdry, end-of-term look has begun to encroach on the nearly abandoned buildings, the ramshackle cinema with its "Perfume Picture Palace" sign, the sandbags on the roof where I saw an American colonel direct mortar fire into Hue in the 1968 Tet offensive. The end of an epoch.

Not far away, the front rooms of Madame Dinh's house on a bustling Hue street are rented to a tailor. A small army of apprentices pedal away at their sewing machines. I first came here in 1965 when Madame Dinh's sons were confronting the Saigon government in the Buddhist rebellion.

The upstairs rooms are still unrepaired since they were shelled in 1968 and the Buddhist shrine there destroyed. In the dark back of the house, with its sparse, dark furniture, the bullet-holes in the walls, Madame Dinh, a strong, tiny woman, stiches a bow for her grand-daughter. "Is it really going to be peace?" she asks. "We'll see. How can one trust anything?"

At night the hard wooden Vietnamese bed, with nothing but a wafer-thin reed mat on it, is as uncomfortable as always. But for the first time there was no sound of bombs and shells, no flares trickling down the sky.

Next day, Madame Dinh talked about her eldest son, killed in action in 1967. I remembered him, fat and jolly. "He died so far away, near Quang Ngai. I went down there to bring him back for burial here. It was very difficult. He was so . . . scattered." For the first time since I met her her hands shook; she was near tears. "The army gave me a plastic shroud. In the end I still couldn't find one arm."

We visited the tomb with two of Madame Dinh's daughters and the grand-daughter in her new bow. The tomb is one of many in a soldiers' cemetery. Under the yellow Buddhist swastika, an inscription says simply: "Died for his country 7-6-1967." Madame Dinh lit some incense sticks, put her hands together and bowed several times to her son. By now she was quite calm. Then we came away.

Bitterness hangs in Vietnam's air like tear-gas. With an old friend called Chinh I walk through a camp of 25,000 refugees driven out of Quang Tri province by the North Vietnamese offensive last year. The squalor is terrible. Nine families crowd into one stench-filled hut. Once American soldiers used it. On the door is an old stencil-mark: "No Vietnamese allowed in this hut."

Feel No Horror

Chinh has a sad, gentle face. He is a dreamer. He works with munitions in the army. His family is nearly penniless. I look at the refugees and say: "Incredible." Chinh says with great force: "What's incredible? Only foreigners are shocked by these refugees and beggars and cripples. Vietnamese feel no shock or horror or anger or even pity any more. They don't worry if one man is worth more than another or more in the right than another." He added: "My brother was killed last year, as you know. Did you know we couldn't find a single fragment of his body? Perhaps these wretches are the lucky ones.

Later, Chinh said furiously: "You know, all foreigners, English too, are only tourists here." "Chinh, I don't feel heroic being in Vietnam". The bitterness went. "Oh, I know that." He smiled.

I take a minibus to a smallish seaside town. There people talk non-stop of three things: soaring prices, corruption, possibility of war again.

In one long back street of tiny shops, only two tradesmen say they are making ends meet. One is a photographer, his head draped under a black cloth taking the portrait of a small girl, who sits before a backdrop of a vast modern mansion, a red American car and something like Lake Geneva. The other is a Buddhist coffin-maker, sawing a plank among his oblong, swastika-covered boxes.

A sack of rice costs $25. An army lieutenant gets $40 a month. A cyclodriver takes home about 40 cents daily. Hence corruption.

A middle-aged writer, who teaches for his living, said: "Crime. Your watch is snatched from your wrists in the street. You ask a policeman to chase the thief. He says do it yourself. Ask anyone: all agree that our national police is in league with the criminals, the heroin traffickers."

Beggars poke through pile of garbage on street in Saigon

A doctor told me: "Look, if you come back just bring me two things, if you don't mind: Some English pipe tobacco and some medical journals. If they come through the posts, someone steals them and sells them to other doctors for cash."

Officials have two or three jobs. An army of unemployed haunts the streets since the Americans pulled out. Near the empty Can Ranh Bay base, a whole township of Vietnamese are stranded, their livelihood gone.

Another night we sat in the doctor's garden rubbing on mosquito repellent. He said: "Look, the counter-appeal to communism must be material or moral. But on the one hand, there are rising prices, unemployment. On the other, corruption, no real democracy, above all no real patriotism."

"Doctor, apart from the need to please the Americans, does there have, in principle, to be democracy here?"

"Well, democracy is written into the Paris agreements, you notice — freedom of speech and so forth. But if the government takes away some freedom and provides efficiency in its place, well and good. Do you think this government can do that?"

Great American investment and development — a great Vietnamese hope, except from the Left. The Communist position is militarily and politically so weak today that leftists can only hope for breakdown. One sort of breakdown: economic collapse. It would involve the average Vietnamese in a new nightmare. But it might end with the left-wingers on the top of the pile. In that lies one danger for Vietnamese hopes of peace.

Another is connected with stubbornness and face, the sort of thing illustrated by the district chief's refusal to fraternize with the Viet Cong.

The sort of thing noticeable, too, the other day near Quang Tri city during a prisoner exchange. I crossed the river that divided the Communist-occupied part of this South Vietnamese province from the totally destroyed city itself. Both sides had set up thickets of flags, tents and loudspeakers. Prisoners of both sides splashed through the shallow water, shouting, embracing their comrades-in-arms once they reached the friendly bank.

Unwanted Cigar

Viet Cong officers stood in khaki sun-helmets and baggy trousers, watching or accepting huge, unwanted cigars from American colonels of the Joint Military Commission. North Vietnamese officers in peaked caps looked on, too.

Guns pointed across the water, but nobody fired. An amazing spectacle.

A young Viet Cong officer (though he confessed to being North Vietnamese) said in English: "I think perhaps relations at our meeting with the Saigon people can go on. We talk, they listen. They talk, we listen." Well, that is some sort of progress, I said to him. "Look at all these flags and guns," and in between them the empty rubble of a once beautiful, happily-populated city. Both sides destroyed it. Doesn't that symbolize this war?" His smiling face went dead, like someone unplugging a TV set. He turned away.

In another town, a Hungarian officer of the ICCS said: "Vietnam is just as I was told". "What were you told?" "Oh, that the fruit and flowers are very beautiful." "What did you find here in the way of the military situation, people's attitudes?" His face went dead. "Sorry, my English is too bad. I cannot understand your question."

Scars Are Deep

Hard attitudes and good ones: at some levels South Vietnamese soldiers and Viet Cong are getting on moderately well, though the scars of war are indescribably deep.

The one overriding danger is connected with face — the face of non-South Vietnamese of any faction. If the leaders in Hanoi decide that they cannot live with failure — they have not won here as they assure their people they have — the temptation of yet another offensive may prevail. Too much stubbornness in Saigon might encourage them. So might attitudes from extreme Left or Right elsewhere, including America.

I watched Madame Dinh and her daughters walking in their trailing ao dais through clouds of tiny butterflies by the river outside Hue. Here, in the gentle confusion of vivid green fields, water, temples, the royal tombs of Annam, is something much nearer the essence of Vietnam than the loudspeaker vans of Hanoi or Saigon. Something indescribably valuable, that conveys, I believe, to the Madame Dinhs and the Chinhs: "Peace and conciliation are all that matters. Here among this beauty is commonsense. All the rest, from North or South, is a corruption."

This face of Vietnam persists. It may be doomed. It has no political power. It is as intangible as smoke. It may be crushed again between armored forces of inexorably selfish international idealists, of Right or Left, whose idealism can lead to the machine-gun burst in someone else's stomach, and a woman on a remote battlefield scooping chunks of her son into a plastic bag.

Looking at Life Insurance

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

In the United States, but not yet in Canada, the life insurance business is beginning to feel the hot breath of consumer advocates on its neck.

One day last month in Washington Herbert Denenberg, insurance commissioner for Pennsylvania, told a Senate subcommittee that life insurance is "one of the leading consumer frauds." He accused the industry of sowing confusion "with policies the public cannot understand, with a pricing system that prevents intelligent shopping."

In Ottawa at about the same time, a much more typically Canadian thing was happening. Information Canada mailed out the report of the federal superintendent of insurance, Richard Humphrys, for 1971. As usual, the report consisted of dry-bones details and summaries of the financial results of insurance company operations. He offered no comment, positive or negative, on the quality of service or value for money that Canadians are receiving from the life insurance business. He sticks to the narrow mandate of the insurance department, which is to see that the companies stay solvent and capable of meeting their obligations.

Yet life insurance is clearly important enough to Canadians to warrant some government attention from the consumer viewpoint. We are probably the most insurance-minded people in the world, with the average household in Canada carrying $22,000 worth of life insurance in 1971. Canadians paid nearly $1.5 billion in life insurance premiums in that year. We the buying public have built the industry into a financial giant that had assets in Canada of $13.5 billion in 1970.

The average Canadian consumer finds it no easier than the American to understand complicated contracts and choose the best insurance for his dependants from among the thousands of different policies offered by hundreds of companies.

Agents could guide him correctly, and some do; but agents and companies have an incentive to sell a prospect expensive rather than cheap insurance, whether or not high-cost insurance is suited to his particular income and needs.

For example, a man of 30 could buy $30,000 worth of level-term (pure protection) insurance to age 65 for a premium of $210 a year, whereas the cheapest form of "permanent" (insurance-plus-savings) policy would cost him about $358 a year for $30,000 worth. For selling him the term policy, the agent would receive a first-year commission of 50 per cent of the premium, or $105; for selling him the permanent insurance, the agent would receive about 70 per cent of the first year premium, or $245. It is in the company's, as well as the agent's, interest to sell the more costly policy, since the savings portion of the policy goes into the firm's funds to be invested for its own profit.

Term insurance has gained ground in recent years. But the bias towards expensive insurance - plus - savings, or "cash value" insurance, is still prevalent in sales to individuals, and it accounted for 42 per cent of new business in Canada in 1971.

This may be one reason why, despite the impressive figures on Canadian life insurance coverage, protection often turns out to be inadequate at the hour of need. J. S. Acheson, president of the Dominion Life Assurance Company, told shareholders last month of a study which showed that the amounts of life insurance received by widows are, on the average, pitifully low — less than $12,000. Almost one-third of the families surveyed had nothing left from their life insurance after paying outstanding bills and the funeral expenses of the breadwinner.

The industry's pretensions to devoted, altruistic public service are strained by continual high rates of lapse and surrender of policies — indicating that many people cannot afford to carry their insurance, or become dissatisfied with it. In 1971, policies with a total face value of $4.9 billion lapsed or were surrendered in Canada; this was nearly seven times the face value of policies that were ended by death, maturity, disability or expiry.

It's time the life insurance business in Canada came under official scrutiny from the standpoint of value to the consumer. The federal and provincial governments should appoint and mandate superintendents of insurance who will be vigorous consumer advocates, not just guardians of the industry's solvency. The main aims should be simply these: To dispel the unnecessary confusion from life insurance, and to deliver the best insurance protection people can afford at the least possible cost. Given the will by political leaders, the means can be found.

Act Amendments to Allow Cities To Launch Business Enterprises

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer introduced amendments to the Municipal Act Monday night which will allow for municipal elections to be held two weeks earlier than usual and provide for election of regional board directors.

The amendments will also allow municipalities to go into business for themselves if they wish and may allow for municipalities to elect their aldermen on a ward basis instead of by a district-wide vote.

Lorimer said it is hoped that turnouts at municipal elections will be increased by moving the elections two weeks ahead. The elections were previously held on the second Saturday in December. They will now be held on the third Saturday in November. He said the problem has been conflict with Christmas shopping in early December.

SECOND ELECTION

There is also provision for municipalities to hold elections once every two years, with election of the entire council and mayor taking place at the same time. Lorimer said only the city of Vancouver uses this practice. Municipalities will have the option to either use the present system of electing half their councils every year or adopting the new system, he said.

The minister said that there will be a second election held at the same time as municipal elections to decide which alderman or aldermen from the municipality will serve on the regional district. Aldermen are now designated by the mayors of the municipality to serve on the regional boards. In the cases where none of the candidates for regional director are elected to the municipal council and when there are no candidates for regional director, byelections will be held.

Power for any municipality to "engage in any commercial, industrial or business undertaking" is granted through another section of the amendments.

Lorimer gave examples of municipalities building their own trailer parks or industrial parks. He said they may continue to assemble and service land. There is to be no restriction on the amount of municipal funds which may be invested in a municipality's business venture.

Elections of councils on a ward basis may be allowed if municipalities wishing to do so apply to Lorimer. Machinery setting up separate wards would be worked out jointly between the minister and the council, he said.

CHARGE FEES

Another section of the legislation permits municipalities to designate "heritage buildings" and prohibit demolition or building of additions on historic structures. Advisory committees concerned with heritage buildings may be set up by the council and funds appropriated from each year's municipal budget.

A further section will permit municipalities to charge fees for rezoning and land-use contract applications. He said many have been charging fees previously, and the amendment is intended to specify their right to do so.

A section of the Municipal Act which restricted aldermen's salaries to annual increases of 6.5 per cent, unless the permission of 60 per cent of the electorate was obtained, is to be repealed by the new amendments.

The salary restriction was brought in by the former Social Credit government to keep aldermen's salaries in line with previous restrictions to teachers' salaries.

Another section specifies that landholders whose land is to be affected by a rezoning or land-use contract hearing are to be notified by mail rather than only by advertisements in the legal section of newspapers.

Gov't Aid For Study Of French

Federal and provincial government funds will make the learning of the French language easier for post-secondary students and French teachers, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Monday.

Dailly announced that fellowships of up to $2,000 each will be available for as many as 60 English-speaking university and college students to attend a French language institution for a year of study.

Travel bursaries also will be made available allowing for two round trips each year for B.C. English-speaking students who spend a year in another province in Canada in a French language institution.

Bursaries of up to $300 will be available for elementary and secondary school French teachers to attend intensive summer programs.

Dailly said it is hoped that the new programs will improve the effectiveness of French teaching in B.C.'s schools.

Funds for the programs are being made available through the office of federal Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner in cooperation with the provincial government.

Two-Headed Calf Dies

CLYDE, Alta. (CP) — A two-headed calf, which some experts said was as rare as Siamese twins, died early Saturday despite its owner's efforts to keep it alive.

The calf, born Wednesday afternoon, had surprised veterinarians by surviving as long as it did.

Bill Dzivinski, who operates a farm near this community 10 miles north of Edmonton had been bottlefeeding the calf warm milk through both its mouths every three hours to keep it alive.

The Prime Canadian

OFC Canadian whisky is 8 years old. Picked in its prime.

At 2-years old Canadian whisky is pale, harsh, unmatured — and around 12 is darker and beginning to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between this time, it becomes golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied. In our opinion OFC is the prime Canadian whisky. That's why OFC is only 8 years old. The prime time for taste, try it.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Victoria man who turned up drunk for his trial in provincial court Monday afternoon was fined $100 for contempt of court.

Donald Allister, of 303 Vancouver, was due to stand trial in connection with a Dec. 19 incident, involving dangerous use of a firearm. Prosecutor John Macintyre said, however, he would have to withdraw the charge because two main witnesses were in Ontario and would not return to testify.

When doubts arose about the accused's sobriety, Judge William Ostler asked the man if he would take a breathalyser test. Half an hour later the man returned to the dock. Police had obtained a reading of .28.

★ ★ ★

Denny Pawliuk, 21, of 308 Catherine, was fined $75 for possession of marijuana when stopped by Victoria police Saturday. Michael Scollon, 21, of Chemainus also was fined $75 for possession of hashish Friday.

★ ★ ★

A 30-year-old man who took his brother's car without permission was fined $75 by Ostler.

James Lorne Etter, 516 Sturdie, was found guilty of the March 13 offence, in which he removed a car belonging to his brother, Murray.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder sent John Lascelles Kenworthy, 57, of 110-1063 Foul Bay, to jail for 14 days after the man pleaded guilty to impaired driving Saturday.

Kenworthy will serve his sentence on weekends. The sentence is accompanied by a three-month ban on driving.

★ ★ ★

Two people were each fined $350 and banned for three months on charges of impaired driving. Hans Lennatr Hornfeldt, 40, of 3232 Cook was stopped by police Saturday evening. Stanley Thomas Armstrong, 1716 Teakwood, was stopped March 21.

★ ★ ★

Robert Agate, 51, of 345 Ker, was fined $350 and banned from driving for three months for driving March 14 with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

PWA Unveils Airbus Plan

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Pacific Western Airlines president Donald Watson of Vancouver Monday night unveiled his company's plans for an airbus service between Victoria and the mainland.

PWA plans to offer downtown-to-downtown service through an integrated bus and plane schedule that could reduce travelling time between Victoria and Vancouver by half an hour.

Watson said inauguration of the service must await a bilateral agreement between Canada and the United States giving PWA rights to offer a similar service between Vancouver and Seattle.

Eventual approval is expected. The service could be started as early as this fall, although it might not get under way until 1974.

Watson outlined the proposal in a speech to the Sales and Marketing Executives of Victoria.

Elaborating on the PWA proposal today, Eric Carswell, sales representative for the company on Vancouver Island, said the service would be patterned on similar ones in some parts of the United States.

He said persons travelling to Vancouver or Seattle would be able to buy their tickets and check their baggage at some location in downtown Victoria and ride a bus to the airport.

Passengers would go directly from the bus to the plane which would be warming up for takeoff.

PWA hopes to integrate its service and fare structure with existing bus companies rather than by going into the bus business itself.

Commenting on the proposal, Jack Thomas, president of Vancouver Island Coach Lines, which services the airport run, said:

"Yes, we are very interested in this concept. We have had talks with PWA on this and we think it would give southern Vancouver Island a tremendous service."

"There should be a big increase in air travel between Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle when this service starts. We will be coming of age in our air service," Thomas said.

Subs Considered For Arctic Study

CALGARY (CP) — Although submarines would be expensive, they could play an important role in developing under-ice resources, says the marine supervisor for Kenting Exploration Services Ltd.

John Pelletier told the Canadian Society of Exploration Geophysicists if the submarine is the answer, a practical system would be developed within five years.

"The seismic and navigation instruments will cost around $1 million and the power plant and hull will cost not less than $7 million to $8 million.

"It would be worth every penny of it . . ."

Several methods of under-ice exploration have been suggested since the Second World War, ranging from small radio or wire-guided submarines without crews to nuclear vessels.

Small submersibles have drawbacks such as inadequate life-support systems but they could assist in studies for pipelines and sea-floor structures.

The proposal with the most merit calls for a radio-isotope powered submersible with room for a crew of 10 or 11, a multipurpose survey package and life support for 30 days.

Pelletier said surface navigation facilities in the Arctic require improvement because of the ever-increasing shipping tonnage.

Depth soundings, studies of deep and shallow currents, ice conditions and improved weather forecasting were needed.

Elevator Union Doubts Strike Will Resume

Seventy-two hours strike notice has expired on five elevator companies in British Columbia but a union spokesman said today he is hopeful there will not be a resumption of the seven-month strike.

Mike McManus, vice-president of Local 82 (British Columbia of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, said mediation officer Gus Leonidas has yet to submit his report to the labor minister, a step which must be taken before a strike can occur legally.

He said this hasn't happened "and even then, we are hopeful a strike will not be necessary again."

The 200 installers and repairmen returned to work one week ago after being on strike since Sept. 8. The strike was ruled illegal in B.C. by the Supreme Court because no barganing had taken place here.

The union and the five elevator companies — Turnbull-Dover, Otis, Montgomery, Armor, Westinghouse — have always bargained nationally and signed a national contract. However, the jurisdiction for this industry comes under the provinces.

Ontario ordered compulsory arbitration of the dispute and other union members returned to work in other provinces, the last being B.C.

The labor department then appointed Leonidas as mediation officer in the dispute and meetings were held in B.C. between the national negotiating committees of both sides.

Last Friday, the union served strike notice after members voted 99 per cent in favor of strike action the previous day.

Union spokesman Warner Baxter of Montreal charged that elevator officials were only going through the motion of bargaining.

McManus said the negotiating committes now have reurned to the east and no more talks are planned. He said the union was expecting Leonidas to file his report with the labor minister.

Issues in the dispute include prefabrication of elevators in factories rather than on site, which the unon fears will wipe out many jobs, union security and changing technology.

$3,000 A MONTH 'FOR SILENCE'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Watergate conspirator James McCord Jr. has testified to a federal grand jury that he received $3,000 a month from the late wife of his co-conspirator, Howard Hunt Jr., to remain silent about his role in the bugging of Democratic headquarters, according to reliable sources.

McCord, the former security co-ordinator of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, reportedly testified that Dorothy Hunt told him the $3,000 per month came from the re-election committee under an arrangement worked out by Kenneth Parkinson, the committee's attorney.

Parkinson called the charge "totally and completely false."

Esquimalt Balks on Library

Esquimalt council balked at the Greater Victoria Public Library Board's record $1.13 million budget Monday and agreed to pay only 15 per cent more than its 1972 contribution.

"To me, an increase in the budget of over 20 per cent is far too high,' said Ald. Ken Hill, who made the motion to limit Esquimalt's increase to 15 per cent.

The library board's 1973 budget is a 21.3 per cent increase over last year, said municipal treasurer Peter Cairns.

As amended last week by Victoria council's finance committee, the budget is up 18.3 per cent from 1972.

Ald. Ed De Costa said the library board's budget increases in recent years have averaged around 14 per cent.

"This is the year we've got to put a halt to it," Hill said.

Only Ald. Terry Prentice and Ald. Art Mebs, who is chairman of the library board, voted against the motion.

Mebs own motion — to accept the compromise proposed by Victoria council's finance committee that the budget's $4,200 travel allowance be halved and that budgeting for the new Saanich branch library be delayed for five months — was defeated.

Mayor Art Young said the library board should not be blamed for the high budget increases.

They were made inevitable when the municipalities in 1969 approved a plan for expansion of branch libraries in Greater Victoria, Young said.

"Now the chickens are coming home to roost and we must accept a fair advancement every year until the branches are established," he added.

Granville Street Closure Eyed

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Part of Granville Street may be closed to all but bus and taxi traffic for a six-week trial period in July and August.

Mayor Art Phillips was to give the plan to city council this afternoon.

It is proposed that only cabs, buses, emergency and loading vehicles use Granville between Nelson and Cordova.

The city is suggesting that traffic will be detoured to Seymour, Howe and Burrard.

The aim is to make Granville more pedestrian-oriented, with sidewalk cafes and other innovations, and to speed bus service.

Phillips predicted city staff will warn that the closing of Granville could cause congestion, at least as long as Howe is partially blocked because of construction of Block 42 of the Pacific Centre project.

But the mayor said the experiment might be tried this summer despite the potential traffic problems. Howe is expected to be back to full use in less than a year, Phillips said.

If the closing of Granville is made permanent, Phillips said, the sidewalks could be widened and the pavement narrowed to three or four lanes from six.

Owen Visits House

In his first official visit to the legislature since becoming lieutenant-governor, Walter Owen gave royal assent Monday to a bill authorizing the government to spend the $1.7 billion in the province's 1973 budget.

It took 30 seconds before the house rose at the supper break.

The department spending estimates were approved Wednesday but although the new fiscal year began a week ago Sunday funds in the budget could not be spent until royal assent was given.

The act passed Monday also authorizes $35 million for extra expenditures incurred during the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1972.

The lieutenant-governor will be back at the session's end, expected just before the Easter weekend, to give royal assent to what is likely to be a record amount of new legislation dealt with at the first full-scale session of the NDP government.

Owen-Flood For Defence

A Times story appearing April 5 reported that Cecil Branson was defence counsel in a B.C. Court of Appeal case against a six-year sentence ordered for Norman George Urquhart Oct. 13 for trafficking in heroin.

Branson was in fact the prosecutor in the case and defence counsel was Dermod Owen-Flood who persuaded the court to reduce the sentence to four years.

Champion Adjusts Collar Around Victory Jacket

AND BACK INTO VAULT

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — You can win a green jacket in the Masters golf tournament — but you can't take it with you.

The forest-green blazers with the flagstick patch are the symbol of the Masters champion. They also are worn by Augusta National members who serve as committeemen.

However, they're protected like crown jewels. They're not allowed off the premises.

The champions wear them to the traditional champions' dinner the Tuesday night before the tournament. The jackets are taken out of the vault and then put back again.

There is a rack of jackets of varying sizes kept in a closet at the club. When a champion wins, a jacket closest to his size is hauled out and draped over his shoulders at the award ceremonies.

Then a jacket is tailored to fit. But it's never really his.

Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, for instance, have won four Masters titles each. But they have only one coat.

"Mine is getting a little frayed," said Palmer.

Tommy's Masters Triumph Eases Pain of Near-Misses

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It was more than a victory for mild, soft-speaking Tommy Aaron, it was something of a triumph for all the weary, frustrated creatures in the world who keep hammering away doggedly at success and coming up short.

"It's no crime to finish second," the tall, bespectacled Georgian said after winning the Masters golf crown Monday. "A man needn't be ashamed of finishing second.

"After all, the greatest golfer in the world, Jack Nicklaus, has finished second 33 times. In my case, it was just that I hadn't won."

Draped in his 44-long green Masters champion's jacket, the 6-foot-1, native Georgian acknowledged his new cloak of fame did not fully hide the hurt that had been swelling inside of him all of those disappointing 13 years on the tour.

They called him a "perrennial bridesmaid." They scoffed that he was a choker, that he couldn't win the big ones. And the height of abuse was reached in 1968 when Aaron was guilty of a slip of the pen that cost Argentina's Roberto de Vicenzo a possible Masters crown.

AT that time, Aaron, as a playing partner, had marked de Vicenzo a par four on the 17th where the Argentinian actually took a three. The mistake cost de Vicenzo a stroke and a tie with Bob Goalby, who won the title outright.

But that was just one scar.

He finished as runner-up 14 times. His first and only tour victory prior to the 1973 Masters was the Atlanta Classic in 1970.

"Winnning here made the near-misses a lot less painful," he said.

Aaron figured in a scorecard drama himself that might have cost him the Masters crown.

Examining his card, Aaron noticed that his playing companion, young John Miller, had given him a par five on the 13th hole when he actually had a birdie four. He corrected it, and thus was saved a stroke penalty.

"That's what you check a card for," he said tersely, refusing to blame Miller.

The Masters had a dramatic climax with a spectacular late surge by Jack Nicklaus and a three-way battle down the home stretch involving Aaron, J. C. Snead and Britain's promising Peter Oosterhuis.

Aaron, 36, weathered the pressure by shooting a four-under-par 68 and then fidgeted awaiting to see if Oosterhuis or Snead could tie him.

They couldn't.

Aaron finished with a 72-hole score of 283 and the first prize of $30,000. J. C. Snead, a nephew of Sam Snead, was a stroke behind at 284 followed by Nicklaus, Oosterhuis and Jimmy Jamieson, tied at 285.

Miller finished at 288, tied with former champion Bob Goalby.

"I gave it my best shot," said Nicklaus, who needed a victory to establish a hatful of records.

Aaron, too, was well back. He had to make up four strokes on Oosterhuis and got away in blazing fashion.

The man from Calloway Gardens, Ga., birdied the first three holes he played, then picked off another on the 530-yard, par five eighth. He made the turn in 32, four under par, and had a share of the lead with Snead while Oosterhuis was one back.

Aaron faltered briefly. He bogeyed the 10th and 11th, but got back into the thick of it with his bird on 420-yard 14th.

Snead, meanwhile, had a two-stroke margin at one time, but pumped one in the water on the treacherous 12th, a deceptive, 155-yard par three hole. It cost him a double bogey and he had to rebound with a birdie on the next hole to make his thrilling but unsuccessful challenge down the stretch.

In addition to his Atlantic Classic victory and 14 runner-up finishes, Aaron has picked up three unofficial victories outside the U.S.

Pondering Putt at Final Green

Like Home-Coming For Nats, Whalers

By The Canadian Press

It will be like old home week tonight when Ottawa Nationals and New England Whalers renew World Hockey Association hostilities at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

The Nationals, who abandoned Ottawa over an arena contract dispute, have seven players who previously were with either Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League or Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A league.

The Whalers, who lead the best-of-seven quarter-final 2-0, have eight who once toiled in the uniforms of the Maple Leaf organization.

But New England seems to have profited most in the wheeling and dealing that transpired after the WHA was formed, and unless the Nationals tighten their defence they could be trailing 3-0 before the fourth game of the series, scheduled for the Gardens Thursday night.

Nationals coach Billy Harris, also a former Leaf, hopes the familiar surroundings will spur his team, which made a late season surge to gain the playoffs.

Former Toronto players he'll be relying on to get his team back into contention are Mike Amodeo, who had a brief career with Marlboros; Wayne Carleton, a former Leaf who was Ottawa's top scorer during the season; Gavin Kirk, Steve King, Tom Martin, Brian Conacher and Guy Trottier.

The Whalers' Toronto contingent includes Brit Selby, who score the winning goal in overtime Sunday; Jim Dorey, Rick Ley, Brad Smith, John French, Terry Caffery, Rick Jordan and goaltender Al Smith.

Smith, incidentally, has drawn the starting assignment for New England, while young Gilles Gratton is the probable choice for the Nationals.

Gratton, although a rookie who played the three previous seasons with Oshawa Generals of the OHA Junior A, has been brilliant. He played in 50 games and the Nationals won 25 of them, 14 on the road. Ottawa's total number of victories was 35.

Drafted by Buffalo Sabres, Gratton spurned a $23,000 package deal and also rejected $54,000 over two years to play for Alberta Oilers in the WHA.

"I think I'm twice the goalie I was a year ago," he said. "I don't think you prove anything in junior—only that you have the potential.

"I think it's easier to play in the NHL than in the WHA.

"Take Bernie Parent. His average this year was 3.7. When he was with Toronto it was 2-something."

And speaking of Parent — he said Monday he would be happy to remain with Philadelphia Blazers, even though he refused to play in their last two playoff games, if the club would deposit $600,000 to guarantee payment of the last four years of his contract.

"Money is not everything, but it sure helps if the security is there," the 26-year-old goalie told a news conference.

The Blazers are down 3-0 to Cleveland Crusaders in their best-of-seven series which resumes Wednesday in Cleveland.

Philadelphia 'Bad Guys' Trying to Improve Image

By The Canadian Press

As Philadelphia Flyers enter tonight's fifth game of their Stanley Cup series with Minnesota, they are trying to tarnish their image as ruffians of National Hockey League rinks.

How's that again?

Is the team that spent 28 hours and 34 minutes in the penalty box this season, inflicted more stitches than a garment factory and rivalled Red Cross donor clinics for drawing blood turning over a new leaf?

Well, perhaps the reformation isn't complete, but the Flyers insist they combined skating and scoring to finish second in the NHL West.

"You have to have some good hockey players to do that," says Bobby Clarke whose first playoff goal gave Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in Sunday's encounter, won 3-0 by the Flyers.

"Everybody has built us up as a rough team. Dummies. It's not so."

Clarke, the second-highest scorer in the NHL with 104 points, says he's miffed by the emphasis placed on the Flyers' physical game and points to the club record of 296 goals this season.

Coach Fred Shero agrees his club was far from a rowdy bunch Sunday.

"I told them before the game that we're getting the worst of the calls because of our reputation. So we decided to play it cool."

North Stars coach Jackie Gordon noted that the Flyers played "a helluva checking game" Sunday to score their first shutout in the series in which Cesare Maniago of Minnesota has two. The teams are tied 2-2 in the seven-game quarter-final.

"I know they're a capable hockey club without all that rough stuff."

The Flyers will have the home-ice advantage for the remainder of the series if it goes the limit. Tonight's game is at Philadelphia where the Flyers dropped the series opener and the sixth will be at Minnesota.

The Flyers believe their young legs—average age on the club is 24—will carry them through if the series is a long one but Shero has maintained his veterans may have the older limbs but they know how to use them.

Meanwhile, St. Louis Blues, who have been in three Stanley Cup finals since they entered the NHL with expansion in 1967-68, will be trying to stave off elimination tonight by Chicago Black Hawks who are seeking their first Stanley Cup since 1961.

Preposterous, Says Bassett

TORONTO (CP) — The Sun says John F. Bassett of Toronto and his group which includes such prominent businessmen as John Craig Eaton, has bought the Ottawa Nationals of the World Hockey Association for "about" $3 million.

However, Toronto radio station CKFH quoted Bassett as saying today the story, as read to him, "is just preposterous."

"There's no way we'd pay $3 million for this franchise," Bassett was quoted as saying. "Negotiations are continuing but are far from conclusive."

"According to reports out of New York where the WHA trustees met yesterday, Bassett has reached an agreement with Nick Trbovich of Buffalo, principal owner of the Ottawa franchise in the WHA," the Sun says.

"Neither Trbovich nor Bassett were available for comment last night. But according to the New York source, Bassett and Trbovich had agreed in principle on the terms of the sale and it remains now only for the lawyers on both sides to work out the contractual settlement.

"The official announcement of the change of ownership in the Ottawa Nats is expected within 48 hours," the source said.

Caps Keep Title

CRANBROOK — Nor-Wes Caps of North Vancouver defeated Cranbrook Colts 13-6 Saturday night to sweep the best-of-three B.C. Junior B hockey final in two straight games. It was the Caps' second consecutive B.C. title.

Situation Looks Grim But Sabres Confident

MONTREAL (CP) — Right winger Rene Robert of Buffalo Sabres is very enthusiastic about playing with the Sabres and with his linemates Rick Martin and Gilbert Perreault.

Robert also likes playing a lot, evidenced by the fact he popped off to reporters Saturday night when he and his French Connection linemates didn't get that much ice time in the third game in their Stanley Cup quarter-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

And Robert, like most people, can get excited at times, as he apparently was after the Sabres knocked off Canadiens 5-1 Sunday to post their first win in four games.

"We are going to win the Stanley Cup now," Robert said after the win. But if he and his Sabres' team-mates are going to do so, then they better start on a winning streak tonight in the fifth game of their series against Montreal.

The Sabres face elimination from their initial appearance in the playoffs and most observers feel it is unlikely they are going to be able to come back and take the series from Montreal now, despite their impressive win in game No. 4.

If Buffalo is to prolong the series, they are going to have to do something they have been unable to do during their first three National Hockey League seasons—win in Montreal.

In the 1970-71 season, Montreal won two of three meetings here between the two clubs, outscoring Buffalo 20-8. The best the Sabres did that season was a 4-4 tie the day after Christmas.

Last season, the Sabres were 0-3 against the Canadiens, who outscored them 19-6. This year, Buffalo was 0-1-2, an improvement to say the least, but the fact remains, no wins at the Forum yet.

Buffalo has another thing going against them as well. Only once has a team ever come back from a 3-0 series deficit to win a Stanley Cup series and that was Toronto Maple Leafs in the final of 1942, long before most of the Sabres were in diapers.

The Sabres will come into tonight's clash with Perreault on the limp. He stopped a Martin shot on his ankle Sunday night, but the speedy centre will play.

But even with Perreault at his physical best, the Sabres know they will be in for a tough time. The Canadiens are a proud hockey club.

They don't like making mistakes and they do not like losing. Sunday's loss was only their 11th in 82 games this year.

"We were sleeping," said defenceman Jacques Laperriere, referring to Sunday's loss. "Maybe we were overconfident because we had three wins already. Maybe we didn't think Buffalo wanted to come back to Montreal for another game."

Canadiens now know better and seldom do they make the same mistake twice.

In the other East Division quarter-final tonight, New York Rangers play the Boston Bruins at Boston Garden.

Rosewall Wins With Rally

HOUSTON (AP) — Australian Ken Rosewall rallied from two service breaks in the third set with breaks of his own Monday to defeat Fred Stolle 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 in the finals of the River Oaks American General Invitational Tennis Tournament.

The victory, Rosewall's first of the current World Championship Tennis (WCT) tour, moved him into the lead of the WCT Group "B" standings. He entered the finals tied with Marty Riessen of the United States.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Former Laker Helps Bolster Irish Roster

Victoria Shamrocks embarked on practice sessions Monday at Memorial Arena with a touch of swiftness not often displayed by the Irish this early in a campaign.

And indications are that the Western Lacrosse Association club could be in even better condition before the club's opening game — a home-floor battle with Coquitalm Adanacs on May 9 — rolls around.

It was the first time in several seasons the ice has been removed early enough for the Irish to use the Blanshard Street facility for pre-season workouts.

And coach Ed Kowalyk has been conducting a determined training program that has several players in top shape after at least three workouts per week for the past six weeks.

Shamrocks also signed a new player Monday and completed a trade that may bring as many as three players to the team.

Centre Jim Guerin, a slender five-foot-eight, 155-pound centre, joined the Rocks from Peterborough Lakers in the Ontario Lacrosse Association.

After having "average success for a rookie," Guerin left the Lakers in mid-season due to differences with team officials and later moved west to attend Notre Dame University in Nelson.

The newest Shamrock was in Victoria at the weekend and left late Monday for Nelson, where he is completing his bachelor of arts degree.

Guerin, who was with Peterborough Teepees when the Ontario club lost the national junior final to Richmond Roadrunners in 1971, comes highly recommended by Bobby Allan, the Lakers' general-manager-coach.

JIM GUERIN
. . . new Shamrock

Allan, a former Nanaimo star, describes Guerin as "lightning fast and a very good stickhandler who will probably fit in with the Shamrock style."

"If Jim handles the centre position as we think he will, we will probably have at least five new faces in the lineup this year," said Irish manager Norm Kowalyk.

One bright bit of news for the Irish was that Gordie Osinchuk is now a Victoria resident. Osinchuk was only able to play part of the season last year because of difficulties in commuting from Nanaimo.

And the Shamrocks have also apparently solved the problem involving their number-one choice in the junior draft earlier this year.

Highly-regarded Walt Weaver of Surrey, who refused to report to Victoria, was dealt to Vancouver Burrards for two players, a third-round draft choice next season and "further considerations."

Shamrocks obtained the rights to defenceman Roger Dubyna and goalkeeper Grant McAuley, two residents of Nanaimo in the off-season.

Dubyna played for Coquitlam Jayhawks and McAuley played for Roadrunners in the Pacific Junior League last Brighter Cricket Summer?

Fans who sit in their cars or stretch out in the sun at Beacon Hill Park and other city fields may see a brighter kind of cricket this summer.

Members of the Victoria and District Cricket Association hope they will.

With an aim to speeding up the action and cutting down on the number of drawn games, the association voted at its spring general meeting to use a bonus point system on a trial basis for a year.

Two batting bonus points will go to the team with the highest runs-per-over average and one bonus bowling point will be awarded for every two wickets taken after the fall of the sixth wicket.

These bonuses will be awarded on top of the usual five points for a win, three for a tie and two for a draw. The bonus system has been used for some time in Britain and several other countries.

"It is hoped the batting bonus points will encourage batsmen to hit out and try to score quickly," Dave Auld, Castaways Cricket Club captain and an association executive member, said Thursday. "And the bowling bonus points are given in a bid to force earlier declarations," he explained.

League play begins here on April 28.

It was confirmed during the spring meeting that the Canada-versus-United States match will be held in Victoria this season for the first time.

The match will be a two-and-a-half-day affair at Beacon Hill park over Labor Day weekend in September and there will be a trial game, also at Beacon Hill Park, on July 8 to aid in selecting a Canadian team.

Swedes Still Big Threat to Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Sweden remained in the hunt for the world hockey championship Monday with a 7-0 victory over Poland while Finland edged West Germany 2-1.

Sweden's win put it in second place with 10 points, two behind undefeated Russia and two ahead of defending champion Czechoslovakia.

Sweden turned in a lethargic performance and only took full command with four goals in the third period when their last-place opponents were tiring.

Finland fought back after being a goal down at the end of the second period to snatch victory over West Germany with two goals in the closing minutes of the game.

On Sunday, Russia walloped West Germany, 18-2, and Czechoslovakia scored a 4-2 win over Poland.

Kent Proves a Winner Because He's Watcher

If Bill Wakeham, the favorite going in, didn't make it as the medallist in Sunday's qualifying round for the CFAX-Vancouver Island Open golf tournament, he at least draws an assist on the play that made the day for Ricky Kent.

Some may figure Ricky's chip-in for an eagle three on the 510-yard ninth set it up. Others might associate Kent's one-under-par 71 with his strong and accurate play from tee to green.

But Ricky figures playing with Wakeham "had a lot to do with it."

"Watching that slow, fluid swing of Wakeham really helps me," said the 26-year-old Glen Meadows amateur, the only player to crack par.

Kent's eagle helped him make the turn with a two-under 34. He might have finished two under (70) but for a putt that hung on the lip and refused to drop in for a birdie two on 17.

Kent always had been a contender until he laid off from competitive golf a few years ago. Came back two years ago and has been playing extremely well. He hit that tough Meadows with three successive sub-par rounds two weeks ago.

Last Saturday was something else. Playing the same course he mastered on Sunday, Kent finished with a 12-over-par 84 "and I had to par the last four holes to do it."

★ ★ ★

He feels most of Saturday's difficulties were the result of a "rushed backswing." Just watching Wakeham on Sunday made the difference.

Wakeham, even after nine, saw his medal hopes evaporate when he took bogeys on 12, 13, and 15. But the Cowichan pro wasn't the only one condemning the back nine. The most difficult of the two, that was the make-or-break stretch on Sunday.

It was the disaster dungeon for Cedar Hill's Bruce Rands, Ken Floyd of Colwood and pro Norm Boden of March Meadows. Rands and Boden were two of the three 80 shooters to miss qualifying because of the luck of the draw.

Both had chances to qualify easily. Rands made the turn with a one-over-par 37, then went six over with successive sixes on 12, 13 and 14. He needed a par on 18 for a 79 but took a bogey five by three-putting.

Boden, a two-time champion, came to the 18th tee needing a par for a 77. His club slipped and Boden's tee shot went sailing into a water hazard. He wound up with a triple-bogey seven, and the 80. The cut of the cards completed his unfortunate day.

★ ★ ★

Floyd was one of only three players making the turn in sub-par figures. Kent, with a 34, and Gorge Vale's Earl Davies, with a 35, were the others.

Floyd matched Davies' front-nine 35, then went eight over par on the next five holes to finish with a 46 and an 81 that put an end to his hopes.

Wakeham, Cec Ferguson (also with a par 36), Kent, Floyd and Davies were the only ones to match or break par on the first nine. Only three could do it on the back nine.

Greg Barnes was the only golfer in the field of 168 to break par on the back nine. His 35 staked him the runnerup medallist's prize. Al MacLeod and Jeff Jones both matched par (36) while Kent and Grant Milliken both "felt very decent" with one-over 37s.

Ex-Mates Add to Yankee Misery As Losing Streak Reaches Four

Because everybody deserves a second chance, New York Yankees will continue with the 1973 baseball season. That's because some people deserve not only a second chance, but a third, fourth, and, in the case of New York, a fifth one as well.

The Yankees, pre-season favorites in the American League East with at least one Las Vegas bookmaker, have started 1973 in reverse, dropping their first four games for their worst start since the Second World War.

The latest loss was 3-1 to Cleveland Indians Monday, made particularly hard to swallow because the stars for the Indians were Rusty Torres and John Ellis, who wore Yankee pinstripes last year.

In the only other games, San Francisco Giants trimmed San Diego Padres 2-1, Cincinnati Reds outlasted Atlanta Braves 8-7, and Houston Astros downed Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1.

Rookie Brent Strom throttled New York on eight hits and three ex-Yankees, Torres, Ellis, and Charlie Spikes had six of the nine Cleveland hits.

Torres had three of the hits, two of them doubles, and drove in two runs. The other Indian RBI went to Ellis.

You might think all this would leave the Yankees upset. But guess again. "When we win a few," said manager Ralph Houk, "we'll wonder how we lost them all."

Ron Bryant spaced four hits and San Francisco won its home opener, defeating San Diego on Chris Speier's home run.

"I started throwing harder after three innings," said Bryant. "In the first three, I was aiming the ball too much. It was partly nervousness. I was excited about pitching the opener. I've never even been a starter at the beginning of the season before."

Tony Perez drilled three singles and Johnny Bench belted his first home run of the season but Cincinnati just managed to hang on against Atlanta. Perez' third hit drove in a pair of runs in a four-run ninth inning but three hits and two errors gave the Braves three back in the bottom of the ninth before reliever Pedro Borbon pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam to save the victory.

VANCOUVER — Luckies from Duncan carried off the team title when the B.C. women's tenpin bowling championships ended Sunday at Brentwood Lanes.

Luckies, who shared first prize of $151 among team members Coleen Blacklock, Donna Ducholz, Maureen Adair, Linda Calverley and Sally Yates, rolled a tournament record 3,033 total for a 15-game handicap series to finish ahead of 70 other teams.

Lake Cowichan Lakettes were second with 2,923 pins and Vancouver Comets, winners of the scratch title with a record 2,692 tally, were third.

In doubles, Angel Wybert and Pat Davies of Victoria rolled a six-game series of 1,258 to take the handicap title.

Gail Cutforth of Port Alberni was a double winner in singles, taking the handicap all-event title with a nine-game, 1,921 series and adding the handicap singles with a three-game 709 series, which included a 114-pin handicap.

Five Island Teams Bid For B.C. Rugby Honors

It's a trio of milestones.

First time in Victoria, first time in the spring, and only the second time anywhere, any time.

It's the B.C. high school rugby tournament and it's to be staged Friday and Saturday at Macdonald and Royal Athletic Parks.

Fans can expect to see some high class rugby but it's a little unfortunate that the seasonal change, plus a ruling by the Vancouver and District Secondary School Sports Council, has prevented some strong teams from taking part.

In previous years, there were no provincial tournaments and a challenge match between the top Vancouver Island school and the Vancouver League winner served to determine a "B.C. champion." Always, these were held in the fall, soon after the start of the high school rugby season.

Last year, for the first time, an official tourney was held in Vancouver, also in the fall, and Point Grey emerged champion, Magee, also of Vancouver, was runner-up.

Now, Point Grey is unable to defend its title and Magee is among other Vancouver schools unable to compete this weekend.

The reason is the high school rugby season in Vancouver ends Nov. 15 and schools there, under a Sports Council ruling, cannot play after that date. Basketball and other sports claim the students after Nov. 15.

Last year, several top rugby-playing independent schools — St. George's in Vancouver and Shawnigan Lake and Brentwood College on the Island — took part in the tournament. This year, all have chosen not to enter although tournament director Ed Kubek, coach of the Victoria champion Claremont Spartans team, said Monday night all had been invited.

Of the 12 schools taking part — five from the Island, four from the Fraser Valley, two from the Interior and one from the Cariboo — Claremont, fourth last year in Vancouver and recent winner of the Victoria high school league and playoff titles for the fifth straight season, must rate as favorite.

Toughest opposition is expected to come from Langley.

The schools are divided into four groups for round-robin play starting at noon Friday at Macdonald Park. Top team in each group goes straight into the championship round semi-finals at 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park. Winners of those games meet in the championship final on the same field at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Claremont is in Group 4 with Cariboo representative, 100 Mile House, and Delta, the fourth-ranked school from the Fraser Valley.

Langley is drawn in Group 2 with Kamloops and Mid-Island representative, Cowichan, while Rutland plays in Group 1 with Centennial, second-ranked Fraser Valley school, and Oak Bay, third-place finisher in the Victoria league.

Victoria Titans, runners-up to the Spartans in both the league and playoff races, plays in Group 3 with North Island entry, Alberni High School, and Princess Margaret of the Fraser Valley.

Tigers won three games in the five-team event and played to a scoreless deadlock in the other encounter.

Oak Bay Marauders finished second and other teams in the tourney were Saanich Hornets, Oak Bay Crusaders and Saanich Chargers. Saanich Wasps, another team in the league, were unable to field a team for the competition.

EGG, ABUSE PELTS LADY

BERLIN (AP) — Hilda Heinemann, West Germany's first lady, was struck on the chest by a hurled egg and verbally abused when she visited an educational project for problem children. As the wife of President Gustav Heinemann arrived at the project site in a former West Berlin hospital, children tossed eggs, shouted abuse and unfurled banners protesting what they considered inadequate city support of the project.

Children 'Dragged by Hair'

NEW YORK — Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, described by her husband as "a wonderful wife and a wonderful friend," picked up Jewish children by the hair and tossed them onto trucks headed for the gas chambers, accoring to court testimony.

The testimony was revealed Monday in Brooklyn Federal Court where Mrs. Ryan, 51, a former Nazi concentration camp guard and now a housewife in Queens, is fighting extradition to face murder charges in West Germany. Former inmates of the camps where she worked gave the testimony in 300 pages of affidavits.

One of them, Rachel Strauser, said she "remembered several trucks driving up to the camp . . . I saw the Braunsteiner woman drag out children by their hair and brutally throw them into the trucks. They screamed and it was horrible. When the children tried to run away, she grabbed them and threw them back into the trucks."

Mrs. Ryan was a guard at concentration camps at Maidanek, Poland, and Ravensbruck, Germany. An estimated 1.5 million Jews were murdered at Maidanek.

JERUSALEM — Dr. Ephraim Katchalski, one of the world's leading biophysicists, was elected Israel's fourth president today in the Jewish state's first contested election for the office. The president-elect immediately changed his name to Katzir, Hebrew for Harvest, from the East European Katchalski. He will be sworn in May 23 for a five-year term, succeeding Zalman Shazar.

President Shazar is retiring at the age of 73 after serving two terms.

NEWPORT, Tenn. — Despite the deaths of two of the faithful, a Tennessee mountain religious sect apparently is unshaken in its belief that drinking poison and handling deadly snakes "shall not hurt them."

Cocke County Deputy B. C. Ramsey said a leader in the Holiness Church of God in Jesus' Name told him the deaths of Buford Pack, 30, and Rev. Jimmy Ray Williams, 34, would not stop the practice.

Pack and Williams drank strychnine at a service Saturday night and died within hours.

DETROIT — Dental researchers hope studies of barnacles, the marine animals that attach themselves to the hulls of boats, will help repair teeth. Scientists at the Michigan Dental Association convention say the barnacle, whose hard shell resembles the calcium make-up of teeth, excretes a strong glue that may provide a clue about manufacturing a similar substance for dental work.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — William Wesley Peters has filed for divorce from his wife, Svetlana Alliluyeva Peters. She is the daughter of the late Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin.

They have been legally separated since early 1972 and have lived apart for 18 months. Mrs. Peters said she could not tolerate the communal life at Taliesin West, where Peters serves as chief architect for the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation.

WASHINGTON — Pentagon officials say they are going to continue listing as missing in Indochina Staff Sgt. Richard M. Allard, whose mother claims she saw him in a Cambodian prison camp.

"First she told us she saw him in a temple in Phnom Penh," one officer said Monday. "Later it was a spot out in the boonies. I hope she is right, God bless her, and I'm not going to attack motherhood, but the story she told us doesn't track."

MILAN — It will not formally open until Wednesday, but some customers already have found their way to the first Italian "sex shop."

"Their age varies from 25 to 50 years," said proprietor Ercole Sabatini, 39, a bearded father of three. "Some are timid and a little uncertain but most are relaxed and know exactly what they want."

'God Of Death' Skull Just Stares

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The head sits on a black velvet box in the attic staring vacantly at whoever comes up the stairs. The light from the window shines directly into the depths of its core.

The 35-pound skull sculpted of crystal rock by the Aztecs possibly as long ago as 800 AD and unearthed in Mexico is the possession of Charles P. Smith of Victoria.

The piece of art is one of five in the world said to have mystical powers and valued by at least one owner as worth at least $250,000.

Smith is realistic about the value of the skull, appreciates it for its art form and violently disagrees with the supernatural powers attributed to skulls of its kind by Anna Mitchell-Hedges, of Kitchener, Ont., in a recently published Weekend Magazine article.

★

Smith calls the skull The God of Death and he bought it during a visit to Texcoco from a Mexican who had unearthed it at an excavation site.

Smith, until now, had no idea about its value.

"They're rare. You couldn't get it by going down to Mexico these days. Everything has changed. The Mexicans working on excavations didn't use to make much and so they'd take these things, hide them in their huts and try to sell them to people like me."

"A Mexican came up to me carrying this skull in his knapsack — they knew I was interested in this sort of thing — and asked me if I wanted it.

"I couldn't understand where he had unearthed it or what it meant to him, but I took it," said Smith.

"It nearly burst my eyes when he took it out."

It's similar, in some ways, to the Skull of Doom, owned by Miss Mitchell-Hedges, now in the Museum of the North American Indian in New York.

Hers, however, according to the article, causes people's pulse to quicken, is hypnotic, powerful and "will not be mocked or jeered."

"If he gets into evil hands," said Miss Mitchell-Hedges, "he could do much evil."

She believes implicitly in its power, would sell it for $250,000 if the buyer would donate it to a museum and will not describe any of details involved in her find, because she's writing a book on the subject.

She did say, however, it warns of great disasters. For instance, when President Kennedy died, "It was so wet, it was dripping," she said.

"It's an awful lot of baloney," says 84-year-old Smith, who has been collecting artifacts "for years and years."

He says the skulls were a sign of death and were buried along with corpses. Made out of pure rock crystal, it must have taken over 100 years "for the Aztecs to carve it, without metal tools — just twirled or throng spun and drilled with sand abrasives."

"But I've had this skull for quite a number of years (30) and I'm still waiting for it to turn blue or something. Let's watch," he says facetiously.

One of the most important aspects of the God of Death is "that you can't scratch it with a knife. It's so hard. Here, take this and just try.

"See?

★

"If you're worried about a curse, $5 would just about do it and I promise you'd have nothing to worry about," he joked.

About the only odd or eerie characteristic of Smith's skull as it sits surrounded by other collectors' items in a small museum-like attic at 141 Howe, is that it's cold to touch.

And there have been no weird experiences since Smith brought it back to Canada, "except maybe with my grandchildren.

"It's funny when you get grandchildren staying here, downstairs gets pretty loaded with people and they have to sleep here in the attic.

"They don't like staying up here with the God of Death, so we have to cover it up. But that's about it," Smith said.

Experts estimate there are four of these skulls in the world: the Mitchell-Hedges one, and those located in a private collection in Italy, in the Louvre and in the British Museum.

What does he plan to do with the God of Death?

"If someone offered me just part of $250,000 I'd probably take it," he said, admitting he had sold most of his collectors' items that had been gathering in his attic after two trips around the world.

"Of course, if I wanted to, I could tell you stories about it you'd probably believe, but they wouldn't be true."

Go-Ahead for Rec Centre

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Esquimalt Won't Hold Second Referendum

Esquimalt council Monday ordered the go-ahead on a community recreation centre that ratepayers rejected in a 1971 referendum.

Council unanimously passed a bylaw approving the borrowing of $1,050,000 to build the centre at the corner of Fraser and Lyall by Bullen Park.

A second referendum will not be held.

"By no stretch of the imagination could we ever get a better deal than this," Ald. Art Mebs said.

Under the new arrangements Esquimalt will end up paying about $450,000 to $500,000 of the total cost of the centre, said Mayor Art Young.

"This is less than the municipality had expected to pay for the same centre two years ago," he added.

The department of municipal affairs has approved a loan of $950,000 for the project under the Winter Capital Project Fund.

One-third of the loan will be paid by the province under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act, a saving for Esquimalt of $316,667.

The municipality will save another $200,000 through winter works grants covering all on-site labor costs between Dec. 1 and May 31 and half of all on-site labor costs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

"We told the people in 1971 it would cost four mills for operating and capital costs for the recreation centre," Young said.

Now, an increase of three mills to cover costs of the centre would be "an absolute outside figure," he added.

"I would bet my bottom dollar it would be under."

Construction is expected to begin next December and take about a year to complete.

An indoor swimming pool and an activity centre for senior citizens and other people will be major features.

"Two years ago this was put to the people in a referendum and it almost passed," said Ald. Terry Prentice.

In the February, 1971, referendum, 51 per cent of the voters approved the proposed $800,000 centre, but the referendum needed 60 per cent approval to pass.

Main reason for not having a second referendum was lack of time, Young said.

'Turn On' Requested For Big Office Towers

Representatives of Victoria's downtown businessmen say the city core faces stagnation because developers can't build big office towers.

Their official advisory committee voted Monday to call on city council to loosen up its density regulations and raise its building height restrictions or face erosion of its tax base.

"Three-to-one is such a low density it just doesn't pay to put up a building on expensive downtown land," said furniture store owner Tom Denny, whose motion was adopted.

The motion specifically called on council to:

—Review the commerical zone's new (June, 1972) floor space-to-land ratio of three-to-one and boost it to seven or even 10-to-one in the core area bounded by Government, Blanshard, Fisgard and Courtney.

—Increase the height limitation by an unspecified amount.

—Investigate the problems connected with development regulated by land-use contracts.

—Encourage landscaped setbacks to offset building height.

—Provide density bonuses to encourage developers to incorporate residential accommodation in buildings.

Downtown Business Association spokesman Lloyd Davies said he feared that if tough limitation on growth were maintained much longer some future pro-growth council might "take the brakes off" too fast and cause a sudden overgrowth.

Land-Use Contracts Best

Credit bureau operator Bob Ellis said he thought redevelopment could be best controlled through land-use contracts. Blanket rezoning would cause shoulder-to-shoulder office blocks to the detriment of the city, he said.

Denny argued that low density zoning had in the last five years "turned off" a major bank development, a group project by a trust company, a bank and an insurance company, and a project by a major insurance company.

"We're being carried away in our enthusiasm to retain the old," he told the nine members of the Downtown Business Advisory Committee's regular meeting at city hall.

We can't afford to be a quaint little museum-type city."

"If we're really serious about having residential accommodation downtown it'll just never pay on a three-to-one basis . . . we'll have the cheapest, squarest, ugliest buildings possible."

Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said present low density zoning encouraged developers to tear down a whole block to make a project economic —"and it'll only be a big developer."

"The central business district will begin to decay or sprawl the road we're on now," he said.

Denny said it was vital the city have a good tax base to justify costs of between $12.50 and $15 per square foot on downtown property.

Denser development did not have to make "a city of steel and glass," he said. "It can be done in an attractive way."

He cited Tacoma as an example of a city which had put brakes on downtown growth and driven business out of the city centre, creating urban sprawl.

Assistant Municipal Manager Colin Crisp said recommendations on downtown zoning were about to be made to city council by the advisory planning commission. He told Ellis city officials could not suggest to developers that land-use contracts were "a way round zoning policy."

(A three-to-one density means that floor space in a building totalled from its various storeys may be three times the area on which the building is located, allowing for setbacks.)

VICTORIANS KILLED IN KITIMAT CRASH

Two Victoria men were killed near Kitimat late Saturday night when the truck they were driving rolled over.

Douglas "Merv" Sneddon, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sneddon, 525 Dalton, and Ronald Fossey, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Fossey, 310 Langford, were about 12 miles out of Kitimat en route to Terrace when the accident happened, Kitimat RCMP said.

Both were employed at Alcan in Kitimat.

Police said the mishap occurred on a private logging road.

Arrangements are being made to fly the bodies to Victoria. McCall Bros. are in charge of funeral arrangements.

Junk Patrol Ready to Roll

A tougher nuisance bylaw will help Saanich inspectors control accumulated junk throughout the municipality's 24,320 acres this summer.

Inspectors also will be coming down hard on weeds during June, July and August.

But as usual, residents will be persuaded, not squeezed, into compliance with the various bylaws and acts designed to keep the municipality looking its best and without risk of weed pollution in gardens and commercial crops.

Chief inspector Eric Gravenor notes that under the Noxious Weeds Bylaw Saanich deals with up to 300 complaints in a three-month season, yet rarely does a case reach the courts or force the corporation to charge weed removal to property taxes.

The new junk law is called the Unsightly Premises Bylaw, replacing the Nuisance Bylaw. An offender will no longer be able to claim stored material has value and therefore cannot be considered junk.

Council may view the premises and simply declare the material unsightly if the owner has not responded to the inspection staff's suggestion to clean up.

Gravenor said staff attempts to enforce the laws uniformly and fairly, although for obvious reasons a strictly rural area will not be judged as harshly as a predominantly built-up area, except where noxious weeds are concerned.

Inspectors work in co-operation with the police and fire departments and besides the building and plumbing bylaws, they are concerned with zoning, fire hazards, abandoned materials such as old cars, and storage of volatiles for home occupations.

Zoning laws, for example, prohibit the storage of more than one unlicensed vehicle per household, unless it is in a garage or carport in residential zones.

Heritage Protection Powers 'Must Be Carefully Applied'

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf, a proponent of historic building preservation, said today proposed new powers for municipalities to protect heritage properties will be "very useful."

But he said the new measures, part of revisions to the provincial Municipal Act announced Monday, will "have to be applied very carefully so as not to put hardships on property owners."

Besides his political position, Bawlf is owner of several historic properties in Victoria's Old Town, among them the Law Chambers building and a section of Chinatown. He is also refurbishing the Belmont office building opposite the Empress Hotel.

Under the proposed amendment, municipalities will, with cabinet approval, be able to designate buildings or lands heritage properties "for the purpose of preserving evidences of the municipality's history."

Buildings will not be allowed to be demolished or changed without permission and lands will not be allowed to be built on.

"Basically it gives council a little bit more in the way of teeth in determining whether a heritage building should be torn down . . . gives them an opportunity to delay the proceedings and perhaps look at the economic viability of other uses," Bawlf said today.

He said he did not expect the powers to be applied to entire city areas such as James Bay or Fairfield, although he was not sure about the Old Town.

"To apply it to areas would be a misuse. It would have to be considered in respect of each building on its own merits or perhaps in the case of a limited area such as Old Town it could be considered in a broader application."

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said in announcing the amendment that it was meant particularly for Victoria. The city has for some time been pushing for such powers.

Vote on Arena Set for Sooke

A referendum seeking support for a proposed $486,000 ice-arena in the Sooke district should be held within two months, the area's capital regional board representative said today.

Howard Elder's prediction follows a meeting Monday, at which 400 area residents packed the Sooke Community Hall to discuss a proposal by the West Coast arena planning committee.

The committee, made up of a cross-section of Sooke residents, has studied plans for the arena during the last three months. It came up with proposals calling for a barebones structure, containing an ice sheet 85 by 200 feet, minimum support areas, change rooms, a snack bar, and first-aid room and seating for 200 to 300.

John Farmer, a Sooke druggist and spokesman for the group, said the proposal met with "overwhelming support."

Farmer said the arena was planned for a site as close to the schools as possible, adding the committee hopes a referendum would be held on or before June 12 "because we want fishermen in the area to be given an equal chance to vote on the question."

Elder, who also attended the Monday meeting, said he will take the request to the regional board with the committee's full brochure of material and "start the path towards the referendum.

"The regional board will have to examine its conscience carefully when it decides at what distance from the arena a Sooke resident would have to support the arena with his tax dollars."

Elder said the electoral district would likely apply for a recreation grant to be made possible from the provincial government through its proposed Community Recreation Facilities Fund Act.

Now We Know What's Up, Doc

But They're Cheaper Than Plumbers on House Calls

Your family doctor is still behind your plumber when it comes to pay for house calls in off hours.

The general practice physician will now get $24 for a house call in the evening or on a Saturday or Sunday under a new fee schedule agreed to by the provincial government and the B.C. Medical Association. The old rate was $16.

But sources in the industry said today that a plumbing contractor will charge you $24 an hour — for a minimum four hours — when a plumber is called out anytime after 4 p.m. and before 8 a.m.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, said today that it's fair to calculate a house call will take an average of about two hours.

If that is so, it means doctors come at half the price of plumbers. And that's making no allowance for the minimum four hours plumbers can claim under their contract.

The house call fee increase is just one of a number of changes under the agreement which has the province allotting an additional 6.7 per cent in funds for medicare. The increases won't affect most patients directly because almost everyone in the province is covered by medicare.

And the $24 charge for off-hour house calls isn't precisely accurate either. Doctors get only 90 per cent of fees under the schedule, the rest being given up to cover the administration costs of the government plan.

McCoy said people have complained in the past that they could not get doctors out at night. The fee change is an attempt by the association to get better service for people.

Among other increases under the new fee schedule:

—A general practitioner's specific examination, the most common office visit service — from $7.50 to $8.

—A day visit at a patient's home, from $12 to $16.

—Consultation with a dermatologist, from $19 to $20.

—Consultation with a psychiatrist, from $35 to $37.50.

McCoy said doctors' overhead costs have been increasing eight per cent a year, with some variation between sections of the profession.

"They had got to the point that doctors' incomes were declining because of the increase in overhead."

Dry Humor: A Sample

JELLY SIDE DOWN
nancy stahl

One of the continuing problems facing a humorous columnist is the threat of running out of humorous things to write columns about, or, as it is called in the trade, "the drys."

Late last week I began storming through the house announcing to those near and dear to me that if they did not immediately do something vaguely amusing, the entire family would probably have to give up their accustomed luxuries. Like eating.

The children glanced up briefly to inform me that it is extremely difficult to concentrate on Chinese checkers when someone is standing in your light.

"Enjoy, enjoy!" I replied. "The electric company will probably disconnect it next week."

"Why don't you go out and do something you've never done before?" our son suggested. "You'll get a whole new experience to write about, you'll get a great column . . ."

"And you'll get out of our light," added our daughter.

Following their advice, I did something I've never done before. That afternoon I broke my wrist.

Of course, I didn't intend to do a column on breaking my wrist. I meant to write about ice skating, but unfortunately I didn't actually skate. I could do a column on standing up on ice skates; a very short column.

Fortunately, after breaking my wrist I had enough presence of mind to begin screaming, writhing on the ground, and babbling incoherently, thus drawing a sizable crowd of thrill-seekers, one of whom drove me to the hospital.

Since I was not actively engaged in giving birth or spurting arterial blood from at least three places, I sat in the emergency ward for two hours. Eventually someone X-rayed my wrist, a singularly unnerving experience during which I was bombarded by potential lethal rays while the nurse, after declaring it all to be perfectly safe, prudently operated the machine from another room.

I arrived home encased in plaster from my elbow to the tips of my fingers, which exhibited the hue and general contours of five kielbasa sausages. Since my return, the children have been obliging me by doing all manner of amusing things that I could write about. If I hadn't broken my writing arm.

Stroke Victim Blames Pill

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Until Nov. 6, 1968, Laraine Henard was a busy young housewife, caring for four foster children and planning to adopt two of them. Now she is partially paralysed, walks and speaks with difficulty, can do only limited work around the house.

A stroke that damaged her brain reduced her mental capacity in some areas to that of a small child. Her judgment is greatly impaired and she and her husband — who is crippled by polio — have had to give up the foster children.

As argued in a $7 million lawsuit now being tried here, Mrs. Henard's stroke was caused by the birth-control pills she had been taking. The Henards contend that the manufacturer of the pills, Syntex Corp., did not give adequate warnings about dangerous side effects. The pills were sold under the brand name Norinyl 2.

Moreover, Mrs. Henard testified she was influenced in her decision to take the pills by a booklet in her obstetrician's office called The Pills and Human Happiness.

The 64-page booklet was distributed by Syntex and, says Mrs. Henard's lawyers, gave no hint of trouble the pills might cause.

The suit asks $1.75 million in general damages and $5.25 million in punitive damages. Defendants are Syntex; Mrs. Henard's obstetrician, Dr. Richard Wallace of Bakersfield; and a doctor who also prescribed the pills, Dr. Harry Wong.

Syntex, chartered in Panama with subsidiaries in Delaware and in Palo Alto, Calif., has denied all charges. The firm also refuss to discuss any aspects of the suit.

During the first stages of the trial, expected to last about 10 weeks, several physicians testified for the plaintiffs that they believe the pills caused Mrs. Henard's stroke.

Lawyers say this is apparently the first suit accusing a pharmaceutical company of misleading or false advertising in material — such as the Syntex booklet — directed specifically at women.

The Henard lawsuit involves events and practices in 1965 through 1968. Since then, said one of Mrs. Henard's lawyers, the Syntex booklet has been revised and all sales of oral contraceptives are accompanied by warnings about possible side effects.

Cheese Dish New Step On Road to Economy

By MARY MOORE

Still on my series of budget-adjusting recipes I am switching from hamburger to cheese dishes now.

It is inevitable that I start with macaroni and cheese but with determination to make the best macaroni and cheese to date.

Because my four-serving casserole was demolished with such gusto I know I should give amounts for families of eight too so both recipe amounts are listed.

MACARONI AND CHEESE

Four Servings:

2 C. elbow macaroni.
8 C. boiling water.
1 tbsp. salt.
½ lb. shredded mild Cheddar cheese (2 cups lightly packed).
2 tbsp. margarine.
2 tbsp. flour.
1 C. milk.
1 C. dairy sour cream.

Eight Servings:

4 C. elbow macaroni.
16 C. boiling water.
2 tbsp. salt.
1 lb. shredded mild Cheddar cheese (4 cups lightly packed).
4 tbsp. margarine.
4 tbsp. flour.
2 C. milk.
2 C. dairy sour cream.

Into a very large pot measure the water and salt, bring to boil, add macaroni elbows, stirring, and boil uncovered 15 minutes. Drain through colander and return macaroni to pot.

Meanwhile make sauce by melting margarine. Blend in flour, then stir in milk and sour cream until thick. Reserve ½ cup of the shredded cheese for the top. Add all remaining cheese to sauce and stir in. Mix with drained macaroni and turn into medium casserole (for four servings) or very large casserole (for eight servings). Sprinkle reserve cheese all over top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes.

Do not be tempted to substitute milk for the sour cream for it makes the difference between good and excellent flavour.

Have a lovely supper by adding a green vegetable such as broccoli, beans or spinach and a great big salad with French dressing.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Wed., April 11

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What may have been settled is now in a state of disarray. This is not necessarily negative. Good shaking up is perhaps overdue. Realign priorities. What was important in recent past may be outmoded. Act accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Seek new ways of achieving. Strive to overcome obstacles through creative effort. Means there are ways to turn apparent adversities to your advantage. Aries person could play important role. Stick to the facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't press issues with friends. It may be hard not to argue — you gain, however, if receptive. Means go with the tide. Now is not the time to present major proposals. Family member has valid complaint. Listen and learn.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Insist on quality. Some may try to take your money in exchange for shabby product. You must speak up, communicate and even experiment. Sagittarian could figure prominently. Conditions are the opposite of settled.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tear down in order to rebuild. Means don't be awed by tradition. Instead, have faith in your own creative judgment. Select what appeals to you. Cycle is such that, despite confusion, you can come up with a winner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Funds may temporarily be tied up, taken from you, withdrawn. Key is to know that the situation is not dire. Special communication will help resolve what appears to be a hopeless dilemma. Gemini is in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Surprises are featured. Excitement replaces what was becoming a boring routine. Placid situation at home can be transformed into creative challenge. Taurus is in picture. Friends seem intent on engaging in emotional fireworks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Conflict may exist between what is practical and necessary — and what you wish could be. Key is to live up to obligations. Emphasis is on security, not only for yourself but for those who mean most to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hold off on travel, if possible. This is a time for reflection rather than direct action. Reservations and directions are up in the air. Save yourself time, money emotional wear and tear. Stay put — for time being.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be aware of potential. Also know when to close deal or sale. Lingering, excessive bargaining could result in no deal. One who pulls financial strings is concerned with your performance. Check prices.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Overcome tendency to act on impulse. Check rules, regulations. Legal aspects of any proposed action should be reviewed. Philosophy of "counting 10" before acting is an excellent one for now. Act accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Low-key approach is best, especially where costs and special services are involved. Hunch is apt to be accurate. Let caution be better part of valor. Cancer, Aquarius persons play key roles. Get sufficient rest.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher; you also are intuitive, capable of piecing together bits of information and coming up with complete story. Many born under Aquarius are drawn to you. September should be an outstanding month for you in 1973.

Free For The Asking

By HARRIET HART

Every adult owes it to his family and dependants to make a will. If you neglect this duty, provincial law will determine to whom your estate will pass. Quite possibly this will not be how you would like to dispose of it.

The 12-page Your Will is a very helpful guide for anybody who is ready to make a will or who should make one. It explains, for instance, that in all Canadian provinces a will signed by the testator in the presence of two witnesses is valid. It also discusses the steps necessary before a will can be drawn up, like analysing of your estate, discussion with a legal advisor and the selection of an executor.

You can change your will at any time either by adding a codicil or by replacing it with a newer version.

The brochure shows you how to establish the value of your estate. It also suggests that you write down in your own words what you want to happen to your possessions, who should benefit and to what extent. Also write down other bequests you want to make besides cash.

Once you have completed your "homework", take it to your legal adviser for further discussion.

Family Women: Caught in a Dilemma

'They Feel They Must Justify Every Move'

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — These days, to be a woman with a family is almost automatically to be a woman in a dilemma.

Women appear to feel they must justify every move, whether they stay at home, do community work or work for pay.

Three women who have sorted it out for themselves offered their points of view in interviews.

Marnie Palkin is a Hamilton wife and mother of two young teen-agers, who is deeply involved in community life.

She said: "I have been surprised at the amount of talking that women are doing and the intensity with which they discuss the value of what they do.

"I compare it with the medical student who has all the symptoms he is learning about. The more women read about how confusing it is for a woman today, the more confused they become.

"The inculcation of guilt has been a life style for women for a long time. They have a right to make a choice, to decide what's good for them and do it and not feel that everything that goes wrong is their fault.

"The variety of choice today makes it hard. I'm not sure we've been brought up to cope with a variety of choice, and you don't ever have to cope if you say, 'My husband won't let me' or 'I can't because of the kids.'"

She said some serious community organizations now are looking for women members and she believes women should agree to join boards or whatever, even if they believe it's tokenism.

"I think the point is you don't make one choice and settle into it for 30 years. Women should be flexible enough to change. If I change, that doesn't invalidate what I'm doing now."

Mary Lou Nicholson of St. Catharines, Ont., is the wife of a department store assistant manager and mother of three boys aged 10 to 15. The family has lived in six cities in 16 years as her husband's firm has moved him.

Mrs. Nicholson said she feels her job as stay-home mother and community volunteer is a valuable one, and she resents what she sees as pressure on her and women like her to get paying jobs as well.

"I think society has put a dollar value on everything. If a woman isn't working for a dollar, then her work is not considered worthwhile.

"I come home and find all the kids in our basement and I'm told it's because their mothers work. I've just come in from an afternoon of volunteer work, but that's free, and that doesn't count.

"I don't feel that I'm a drag on my husband, that I'm a prostitute for my comfort. I do most of the decorating and gardening, I refinish our antique furniture. These are things that Bill doesn't have to pay people to do . . .

"I used to feel guilty because I didn't dedicate my whole life to my children. I don't now.

"I think Bill and I will have more time to ourselves, to have a leisurely dinner or do some of the things we want to do."

Sheila Haslam of Toronto is payroll manager for a mail-order firm. She has been working since her three children were young. Now they are 19 and 23. Her life has been simplified to the extent that her mother lives with her and her electrician husband and has been able to look after the children.

But Mrs. Haslam said she would have worked anyway. She began because they needed the money and continued because she prefers the life to being at home. She said she feels the whole family has benefitted from the decision.

"I think you enjoy your children more. You end up with a more compatible relationship. You have a broader scope, a broader understanding, and they are more independent.

Mrs. Haslam said she believes there are some ground rules for a successful combination of job and home work.

"You have to be sure you and your husband agree on raising the children and on whether or not you should work.

"You have to feel that your children are taken care of adequately.

"There is a need for day care and for after-school care, and they should be geared to income.

"Somewhere you have to face the fact that you are what you are, and you don't want to stay home."

Women on Pill 'Ignore Health'

LONDON (Reuter) — Women on "the pill" tend to be the type that ignore health warnings, British researchers have reported.

This is one of the preliminary deductions from the biggest study ever made of the use of contraceptive pills, involving 46,000 British women.

First results from the study were reported to a joint congress of British and Canadian family doctors at which it was also disclosed that a smaller, safer birth pill is being tested. It could be on the market within a year.

BLIND SINCE BIRTH, 17-year-old Mary Lorefice of Toronto sings to audiences in order to earn enough money to pay for an eye operation which doctors say could restore her sight. With the help of a Toronto area service club, Mary has had two engagements and has been promised more.

Clairvoyant Predicts Fall Vote —And Baby Girl for Trudeaus

TORONTO (CP) — Elias Mallett says the next federal election will take place next autumn and Prime Minister Trudeau will win with a slim margin again.

And Elias Mallett should know. He's a Toronto clairvoyant, astrologer and palmist who predicted Mr. Trudeau's top-secret marriage, that the prime minister's first child would be a boy and that he would win the last federal election by a small margin.

Speaking from his midtown office, he said Margaret Trudeau will have another child, this time a girl.

Mallett predicted — in July, 1970 — that the Vietnam war would end in December, 1972, or January, 1973. In 1969 he told Claude Wagner, now the Conservative's Quebec lieutenant, that Mr. Wagner would enter federal politics and some day would be prime minister.

A week before United States Senator Robert Kennedy was assassinated, Mallet wrote to him from Toronto with dire warnings.

He also claims he foresaw a big air disaster in Toronto before the crash of an Air Canada DC-8 took 109 lives in July, 1970.

He predicts that there will be peace in the world including Ireland and the Middle East from late 1974 at least until 2000.

Among his other predictions:

Quebec will continue to have problems but will never separate from Canada and Premier Robert Bourassa will win the next provincial election in Quebec.

The New Democratic Party will never merge with the Liberals and is going to become stronger each election.

The 1976 Olympics will be held in Montreal, with no serious violence but with heavy financial losses.

dear abby

Silence Is Golden

DEAR ABBY: The names are fictitious but I am telling it like it is: My name is Debbie. I have been dating a fellow named John. I mentioned to John that Linda, a good friend of mine, is fantastically well put together. John calls Linda and asks her for a date. Linda accepts. She then tells Carol (who is also a friend of mine) about her date with John. Carol tells me. Naturally I am humiliated and angry.

I contend that when John called Linda, she should have refused him immediately saying she and I were good friends, and then hung up the phone. Furthermore, Linda shouldn't have told Carol or anyone else about her date with John because it made me look like a fool.

My friends contend that everything worked out for the best and I am lucky to have found out that John was bad news. What is your opinion?

Debbie

DEAR DEBBIE: Your friends are right. But there are several lessons to be learned here:

1 Never "mention" to a boy friend that another girl is "fantastically well put together." (He may not be able to resist the challenge to "take her apart.")

2 If a man is interesting, few girls, out of loyalty to a girl friend, will pass up a chance to date him.

3 Your friend Linda talks too much.

4 So does Carol.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 65 years old, and have no family. Do you think I am too old to learn to drive an automobile? Some of my friends laughed at me when I mentioned learning to drive at my age.

If I could drive I wouldn't have to wait for friends to take me shopping and to church and other places I might want to go.

Have any of your readers learned to drive at my age? If you think I'm too old, I'll sell the practically new car I have had in my garage ever since my husband died nearly a year ago. Thank you for any help you can give me. — Minnesota Widow

DEAR WIDOW: There is no age limit for learning to drive in your state. you will need a learning permit, however, which can be obtained by taking a written test. (Inquire at your Motor Vehicle Department.)

If you obtain the permit, driving lessons are available at the AAA and driver education schools, listed in your phone book. You will then be given a driver's test to determine whether you can become a licensed driver. Sixty-five is NOT old, my dear lady. Not if you have your health and good vision.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died nearly two years ago. My family has been wonderful to me. My immediate neighbors were very considerate the day of the funeral. They came with food, etc., but from that day until this I have not heard a word from any of them. (I am not complaining. I kept myself very busy, and didn't brood about my loss.)

Four weeks ago I slipped off and quietly married a very nice gentleman I had known for years. I had intended to invite my neighbors in and introduce him, but I guess I wasn't quick enough because I just got a call from a friend of mine telling me that I had better hurry up and announce my marriage because my neighbors were "talking."

It seems they just found out I had a man living with me and they think we are living in sin. I think it's rather funny. What are your thoughts on this, and what should I do? — Legally Married "Sinner"

DEAR "SINNER": Don't tell them anything. Let them "find out" you're married, just like they found out you had a man living with you.

Corporation Tax Hike Okayed

Only 12 minutes of the legislature's time was occupied Monday in giving approval in principle to a bill to increase corporation income tax from 10 to 12 per cent.

The brevity of debate preceding second reading of the amendments to the Income Tax Act was in marked contrast to the lengthy opposition speeches protesting the measure during the budget debate earlier in the session.

Spokesmen for all three opposition parties again criticized the move, saying the tax increase was unnecessary and would be passed on to consumers, but when second reading was put to a voice vote there were only a few muted "No's" from their side of the house.

Immediately, Premier Dave Barrett requested a formal vote and the bill received support only from the government members, in a 29-to-13 result which saw the Social Credit, Liberal and Conservative parties all voting against the principle of the legislation.

In moving second reading, Barrett told the house the increased tax would produce about $18 million annually in additional revenue. He said it represents a catching up with the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, where the corporate income tax is also at 12 per cent, and is an effort to ensure that corporations pay their fair share toward the cost of providing essential services in B.C.

After Conservatice house leader Scott Wallace, Liberal leader David Anderson and Newell Morrison (SC-Victoria) had all criticized the government for imposing the tax increase, Barrett dismissed the complaints as "specious nonsense based on presumption."

Attacking the Liberals in particular, for suggesting that those consumtrs on low incomes would be hardest hit by the higher tax, he said the only way that section of society can be helped is through the federal government increasing their basic income tax exemptions.

"They can't deduct white shirts and laundry and everything else the corporations can get away with," he said, in "tax rip-offs" that had been going on for years.

Barrett said he hoped his NDP colleagues in Ottawa would "vote against the Liberal government that is giving away tax concessions to every corporation in this country."

Addressing the Liberals across the floor of the house, he asked: "Why do you think we are here? To protect the large corporations?"

Barrett said the argument that business should only be taxed in times of depression and not when the economy is booming is "absolutely stupid."

"The time to tax is when the money is there." He said he was proud of the tax increase and also that B.C. is a wealthy province in which it is possible to plan services for people.

In replying to Socred criticism of another bill, which would exempt the family farm from succession duty where the farm passes to a child, Barrett made it clear that there will always be succession duty in B.C. as long as the NDP remains in power.

He said ex-premier W. A. C. Bennett had pledged he would never let the rich go untaxed, "until he discovered the Kelowna Charter" of policy principles prior to last year's provincial election.

"The wealthy people in this province have become wealthy because of the fruits of this province and they should pay a fair tax on succession duty and that is only proper," Barrett added.

For the Socreds, Morrison said the amendments don't go far enough. His party won't be satisfied, he said, until the whole act is repealed.

Envoys Stage Fair

OTTAWA (CP) — The diplomatic community held its version of a global village fair Monday as 27 countries set up stalls to sell national foods and products in a downtown hotel.

Organized by the wives of diplomats posted to Ottawa and local residents, the fair had one feature not found at less sophisticated gatherings — a booth with credit card facilities for diplomats short of ready cash.

The French booth offered perfume, the Indian section two racks of native clothing and the Sri Lanka exhibition offered tea. The Cuba exhibit was a hit with its iced daquiris and cigars.

In Mayor's Race

BURNABY (CP)—Dave Mercier, a former alderman, announced he will contest the Burnaby mayorality race in December. He said he will campaign for the next eight months.

Indians Urged to Seek Home Grant Back Pay

Premier Dave Barrett Monday invited Indian bands in B.C. to submit group applications for back payments to which they are entitled under changes to the provincial home acquisition program.

By this means, he said, the bands may be able to finance capital projects on reserves or to organize bulk-buying programs which would enable individual band members to benefit from lower costs in undertaking furnishing schemes or home improvements generally.

Barrett was moving second reading in the legislature of amendments to the Provincial Home Acquisition Grant Act, which for the first time would extend grants and loans available under the program to native Indians living on reserves.

He said the provincial government would "welcome" group requests, as had been submitted last week by Haida Indians from Masset, in the Queen Charlotte Islands. But in such cases the applications must include the signatures of individual band members who wish to take part in the group program.

Anyone is entitled to opt out of a group activity and apply for his or her personal back payments, Barrett said. The legislation would be retroactive to April 1, 1966, when the provincial home acquisition program started.

MLAs from opposition parties supported the legislation, but Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) urged the government to go further in correcting injustices to Indians.

Among his suggestions were that the provincial per capita grant paid to municipalities should also be made available to the 159 self-governing bands in the province, and that articles purchased by Indians for use on reserves should be exempted from the 5 per cent provincial sales tax.

In reply, however, Barrett rejected the latter proposal, claiming that if the tax exemption were allowed it would amount to a "reverse form of discrimination."

All citizens should pay taxes equally and receive benefits equally regardless of race, creed or color, he said.

The bill was given second reading.

Beware Blue Chips Bennett Warns Gov't

The NDP government was advised Monday against investing money from civil servants' and teachers' pension funds into common shares of corporate enterprises.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett said that although "blue chip" stocks may be making money for investors now, but in two or three years' time they may have collapsed.

Bennett was opposing amendments to the Civil Service Superannuation Act which will allow the government to invest civil servants' pension money into whichever corporations the cabinet designates. The amendments were approved in principle, however, by the legislature.

Bennett said many large companies are finding themselves caught in a cost-price squeeze and that many eventually could find themselves in serious economic trouble. He said that the government, if it invests in such ventures, will not be protected from a change in ownership in the corporations which could have an adverse effect on their operations.

Non-Union Curb Closer

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Legislation which would bar non-union contractors from undertaking provincial public works projects was given approval in principle by the legislature Monday night after it had been vigorously attacked by all three opposition parties.

Opposition MLAs complained that the Public Works Fair Employment Act was anything but fair, in discriminating against non-union firms — especially smaller companies — and against the more than 50 per cent of B.C. workers who do not belong to trade unions.

There were also charges that in the long run the policy will prove more expensive to taxpayers, because in some areas the government will have to go further afield to find and do business with firms which have collective agreements with their employees.

During the debate, some alternative titles were coined for the bill. James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) suggested a more appropriate name would be Public Works Union Enforcement Act, and Robert McClelland (SC—Langley) said he chose to call it the Catch Up With Political Debts Act.

Chabot said the bill makes Labor Minister William King "the chief union organizer in the province," in keeping with King's earlier statements that part of his role is to ensure workers belong to trade unions.

He said the minister should be neither pro-management nor pro-labor, and while the government has a responsibility to ensure workers engaged on public works contract receive wages at least equivalent to union wages, there should be no compulsion on workers to join a union.

At the present time, Chabot said, about 10 per cent of contracts let by the government go to non-union firms. King has the support of large contractors in the new policy "because they want to add to the 90 per cent of government work they are doing already."

Liberal leader David Anderson said the bill discriminates against the majority of workers because it restricts the number of people who can benefit from government work to less than 50 per cent of the employable people in the province.

If such restrictions were applied to religion, or to human rights generally, there would be a public outcry, he said.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said his personal philosophy is that the individual is more important than the state, and that principle is violated in legislation which discriminates against people who are merely exercising their freedom of choice concerning employment.

The legislation is "really a tax on anyone who wants to work in British Columbia," according to Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River), who claimed that many small companies will be put out of business once the policy takes effect.

Phillips speculated whether any money from the union funds boosted by increased membership would find its way into the coffers of the NDP, adding: "If you want to do any business at all you are going to pay into their election funds."

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) said the real author of the bill was "someone in the labor union movement the minister wishes to appease," and the government had brought in the legislation under union pressure.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) said the government move will force individuals to join the big international unions and as a result their union dues will go to headquarters in the U.S.

When debate resumed after the supper hour, Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) kept up the Socred battering by terming the legislation a government attempt "to use people's own tax money to cut their throats," and "another example of Barrett's Blunderland."

In winding up the debate, King said he had no apologies to offer for the fact that the NDP government prefers to do business with employers who have collective agreements with their employees.

There was no compulsion on anyone to do anything they didn't want to do, he said.

"We are simply saying this government will patronize those people who are fair to labor, fair to their employees, and who don't hold the condescending, patronizing attitude of the Social Credit party."

King gave an assurance that school boards and municipalities would not be bound by the legislation.

With the two Progressive Conservatives absent for the formal vote, the bill passed second reading by a comfortable 34-15 margin, the Socreds and Liberals both voting against.

OIL INDUSTRY GOUGED?

The provincial government's increase of petroleum royalties was described as "punitive" Monday night by a Social Credit member of the legislature who suggested that oil companies will move their operations out of the province.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace) was speaking during debate on the principle of amendments to the Petroleum and Natural Gas Act which increase petroleum royalties from the previous range of five to 16 per cent to the new level of between 10-40 per cent.

Smith said the increase is the result of "tupid economics by people who know nothing about the oil and natural gas industry in this province."

He said the government's "greed" in increasing the royalty level will result in a net loss each year to the provincial treasury because oil companies will cease their operations and the province will lose the corresponding revenue.

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick defended the new levels, saying oil production in B.C. is on the decline and the government wants to get more of a return for the natural resource before it is exhausted completely. He said that by current production standards there are only six years of oil production left for the province.

Mint Plants Curb Cabbage Whites

Getting into the cabbage patch may not sound very exciting but what you find growing there will amaze you, since more distinct forms of plants are likely to be discovered in this group of vegetables than in any other genus.

The genus is known collectively as Brassica, yielding such diverse edible plants as common cabbage and the turnip.

All are high in nutrition, especially in the easily destructible vitamin C, a good enough reason to grow these foods in the home garden so that loss of this essential element is reduced to a minimum between gathering or pulling from the soil and eating.

Broccoli is high on the list, both the purple and green sprouting, also known as Calabrese; in some countries the solid white cauliflower heads are called broccoli; Brussels sprouts (so named from the Belgian city where it was first grown commercially) are closely related to the crinkly winter Savoy cabbage raised for centuries in the mountainous district of that name in eastern France; the hardy curly kale known also as Borecole, is amazingly resistant to hard frost; Russian kale is even hardier.

The red, or purple-headed cabbage has its own distinct flavor; variegated kale is useful for three purposes — flower bed decoration, floral arrangements and for eating. In cooking, the lovely crested leaves of rose, crimson, purple and ivory white all turn to an appetizing green.

Portugal cabbage of Couve Tronchuda is listed in some seed catalogues. The midribs only are used of this plant, though a fairly tight cabbage forms at the head of the plant.

★ ★ ★

Chinese Cabbage is found in Victoria stores but not so often in local cabbage patches. Seed is listed, the recommended one is usually Wong Bok. Kohlrabi is a delicately flavored turnip-like vegetable which grows on top of the soil anchored by its feeding roots. It, and the more conventional turnips are also Brassicas.

Nine-Star-Broccoli holds its place in the cabbage patch for several years for it is said to be indeed perennial. I have the seeds now to sow by the middle of April, expecting the broccoli heads to form a year from sowing.

Just now in April, cabbages and the white cauliflowers for late summer should be set out in the garden as small plants. Seeds of Chinese cabbage need to be sown now where they are to grow and later thinned to stand about eight inches apart.

All the cabbage family must have firm soil. Tread it before putting in plants, and firm it around the stems. For safeguarding against club root disease, dust each planting hole with lime. This is a preventive, not a cure.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

For those who believe that bridge is only a game (many believe that it is a maniacal obsession), the following item is offered in refutation. The incident occurred in the early 1930's, and is quoted verbatim as it appeared in a Chicago newspaper some 40 years ago.

"Cut Glass Has Its Uses

"Chicago — Mrs. Lila Gray Colyer, who held 13 diamonds in a bridge game and won the contract at six notrump after a spade bid by an opponent, is suing for divorce. When she was set 12 tricks, her husband, so the complaint avers, hit her with a cut-glass bowl, the nearest missile."

In today's deal, we have a situation remotely similar in type to the bidding of six notrump with 13 diamonds. The difference is that in this deal, the bidder entertained hopes of fulfilling his contract. The hand came up in a duplicate game.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

♡ J 6
◇ A K Q J 10 7 3
♣ J 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

South's opening bid of three notrump is a conventional type of bid employed by some experts. It is known as the "gambling three-notrump opening," and is made on a solid seven-card suit with a smattering of high-card strength on the outside. As he makes the call, the bidder hopes (1) that partner will have enough "stuff" to enable the contract to be fulfilled; or, failing that, (2) there is the hope that the defenders will not find the winning defense.

After West had opened a low spade, and the dummy came into view, South perceived that he could cash eight sure winners. If he played low from dummy, and East possessed the spade king, declarer figured to go down five or six tricks. The issue was whether declarer should settle for down one; or to gamble going down five or six tricks (and possibly running the risk that partner might throw the nearest available missile at him).

As luck would have it, declarer made a decision which, if it had turned out unfavorably, would probably have been described as an "atrocious guess": he played low from dummy at trick one. East's jack of spades was put up, and declarer, with a sigh of relief, won the trick with his queen. He then claimed his contract: two spades and seven diamonds.

PYRAMID PROBED BY COSMIC RAYS

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A Nobel prize-winning physicist is using cosmic rays to probe a pyramid for a Pharaoh's burial chamber. If he finds it, the discovery would be the greatest in Egyptology since Tutankhamen's tomb was found in 1922, the scientist, Dr. Luis Alvarez, said Monday.

"We have proved the feasibility of our technique," said Alvarez.

The experiment is under way in Egypt at the Pyramid of Kherfren, whose face has been immortalized on the Sphinx, Alvarez said in a lecture at Cal Tech.

Alvarez and his associates are "X-raying" the pyramid by means of a muon chamber — which counts and records the impact of muons from cosmic rays as they strike the earth — placed in a room at the base of the structure, Alvarez said.

"If one interposes the five million cubic yards of limestone between the sky and the muon recorder, he should be able to tell if the pyramid is solid ornot" by the impact patterns of the muons, Alvarez said.

Four Jailed In Drug Sales

Prison terms were ordered by Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake Monday for four men convicted of selling drugs to RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats.

Kenneth Raymond Robinson, 21, formerly of 211 Helmcken, was sentenced to two years less a day definite and two years less a day indefinite for selling two caps of heroin to Froats for $35 July 24.

He was arrested in October and convicted March 19.

Before sentence, his father, David Robinson, testified that his son moved back home in September and asked his parents to help him overcome his heroin addiction.

"Are you and your wife prepared to stand behind him in the future?" asked defence counsel Ted Pollard.

"Certainly, I'm his father," said Robinson.

In his address to the judge, Pollard emphasized that Robinson want home for help "before he knew he was going to be arrested."

"It's really the parents that suffer in these situations," said Pollard.

He described Robinson's case as "rather unusual" because he had a good family background.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson said, "The obvious good background and upbringing . . . makes his conduct even less excusable."

Branson described the accused's own house on Helmcken Road as an "armed fortress," pointing out that the back door was nailed shut, the front door was heavily barred, and Robinson armed himself with a .22-calibre rifle to walk to a heroin cache in his own backyard.

★ ★ ★

Arthur Desmond Spelman, 21, who pleaded guilty March 21 to trafficking in MDA and hashish, was sentenced to a total of six months.

Evidence indicated Spelman sold one gram of hashish to Froats in the Churchill Hotel June 21. On June 19 he sold four caps of MDA to Froats.

Before sentence defence counsel David Lisson said, "At the age of two years this man's parents broke up . . . both were alcoholics at the time."

"This man stands before you, guilty of two trafficking offences on two different occasions in two different restricted drugs," said Branson.

Spelman's pre-sentence report "shows an unfortunate background," said Drake, "but people must accept their responsibilities."

He was sentenced to six months on each charge to run concurrently.

★ ★ ★

John William Farmere, 26, of 840 Pembroke, charged jointly with Spelman on the trafficking in MDA charge, was sentenced to four months.

"From the pre-sentence report it is quite clear he's had a troubled childhood," said defence counsel David Lisson. "His father deserted his mother when he was six months old. Later on his own marriage was a failure."

"There is reference in the pre-sentence report to depression and anxiety," he said.

Farmere committed the offence in June and was arrested in October.

In sentencing Drake said, "the accused here was simply a party" to the transaction and he has matured considerably over the past year.

★ ★ ★

Robert Stanley Taylor, 21, of 3244 Linwood, was sentenced to three months for selling Froats two grams of hashish for $10 in the Colony Motor Inn Sept. 26.

Taylor testified he had never sold drugs before and had terminated his involvement with drugs when he was arrested Oct. 13.

Defence counsel Robin Dalziel said the offence was a "once-only transaction."

★ ★ ★

Brian Parker of Sooke was fined $500 and placed on probation for one year for selling two capsules of speed (amphetamines) to Froats in the Churchill Hotel July 7.

Parker testified he was approached by Froats in the beer parlor. Parker got the drugs from someone else in the pub, sold them to Froats in the washroom for $20 and then gave the money to the other person.

In sentencing, Drake said Parker, who testified he earned $150 a week net pay, would no longer be able to support his wife and child if jailed.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Quakery Still Finds Targets

In that fine little journal, "Mayovox", published every month by the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., I read that recently 2,839 adult Americans scattered throughout the United States were interviewed by government agents.

The interviewers noted that millions of Americans, who apparently are satisfied that they know more than their doctors do, are prime targets for quacks, with their many health-food fads, and their sometimes questionable advertising claims.

Every so often I read estimates of the many millions of dollars that are wasted by laymen and often elderly laymen who cannot easily afford to lose much money on medicines and diets that are of very doubtful value. People buy these under the impression that they will perform miracles of healing, or will help them with their sexual problems or their nervous problems, or will increase their effectiveness in their work or social life.

The government interviewers found that 42 per cent of the people they questioned would not accept even almost unanimous opinions of very able research professors who say that they have tested a certain supposed cancer cure and have found it worthless; and more than 10 per cent indicated that they would try a treatment recommended by a friend, even if a doctor said it was worthless.

That a cancer treatment was worthless is always obvious when it no longer sells to any great extent, or is completely forgotten after its proponent has died or has fled to some distant country. A drug like penicillin or cortisone will keep being used ages after the discoverer has died.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

'I CAN'T GO ON...

The Salgueros . . . terrified of jail

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-two-year-old Irma Salguero from Guatemala said today she plans to turn herself in to the immigration authorities from whom she has been hiding here since Feb. 5—because she is expecting a baby within a month.

"I can't go on like this any more," she said in an interview with The Star. "I have to be calm when I enter the hospital to give birth to my child, but I'm terrified of jail."

Mrs. Salguero said she came to Toronto Feb. 3 for a holiday and change of scene. She was five months pregnant and depressed.

Her 27-year-old salesman husband was unable to accompany her because of business commitments, so she came alone, she said.

But, said Mrs. Salguero, when she arrived in Toronto, immigration authorities did not believe her story and told her she would have to return home. They let her stay for the weekend and told her to return the following Monday to report to a special inquiry officer.

She didn't.

Mrs. Salguero said she had spent more than $400 on the trip and was determined to have her holiday.

WITHHELD TICKET

But two weeks later when she wished to return to Guatemala, Mrs. Salguero said she realized she could not—the immigration authorities had withheld the return portion of her flight ticket.

To obtain the tickets she would have to approach the immigration authorities and face possible detention in Toronto jail.

So Mrs. Salguero wrote advising her husband of her plight. He flew to Toronto last month, planning to buy his wife another ticket and then accompany her home. They hoped they would be able to pass through the airport with the regular flow of air travellers.

But then the doctor who examined Mrs. Salguero last week forbade her to travel—the trip could be dangerous to her, he thought.

So now, Mrs. Salguero has resigned herself to facing the immigration authorities.

But Mac Steel, district immigration enforcement officer in Toronto, said today: "She has nothing to fear."

Each case is judged on its own merits, he said.

"We're certainly not about to throw a pregnant woman in jail and certainly not after she gives birth to a child."

AA PLANS FAMILY RALLY

An Alcoholics Anonymous rally will be held Easter weekend, April 20-22, at the Leonardo da Vinci Centre, 195 Bay.

The rally will feature open meetings of AA, Al-Anon and Alateen.

Al-Anon family groups help a problem drinker's family adjust their thinking so that they can lead normal lives. Alateen helps young people between the ages of 12 and 20 cope with problems caused by the drinking habits of parents, other close relatives or friends.

The following open meetings will be held during the rally. AA, Friday, April 20, 8 to 10 p.m.; Al-Anon, Saturday, April 21, 1:30 to 3 p.m.; Alateen, Saturday, April 21, 3:15 to 4:45 p.m.

No Law Against Begging

The city of Victoria has no authority to make laws forbidding panhandling in the streets, according to City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady.

In reply to an inquiry from the Central Business District Advisory committee, O'Grady said the offence of begging in a public place, or vagrancy, was formerly the subject of federal legislation and part of the criminal code.

"Hence, it is still regarded by some authorities as a matter coming within the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Parliament."

The downtown businessmen's committee was concerned about a new fashion among youth for seeking "any spare change" around the downtown area.

Judge Almost Run Over

DUNCAN — A Duncan man who almost drove his car over a provincial court judge here was fined a total of $110 in provincial court.

Donald Bolton almost ran the judge down at the Duncan police station shortly before appearing at the station to lay a complaint against a police officer.

Bolton had gone to the station after being stopped several times by a police officer in connection with a ticket he had been issued March 30 for driving without his motor vehicle registration.

Bolton claimed he was being harassed by police.

Bolton swore at members in the police station, demanding to know "what was going on."

He refused to stop swearing, so police held him in custody for three hours until he calmed down, court was told.

Bolton pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance and was fined $100.

He was fined $10 for driving without registration.

Officer Hurt In Car Chase

DUNCAN — An RCMP officer is in satisfactory condition at Cowichan District Hospital with a broken leg and finger, suffered when his car went out of control while pursuing another car Saturday afternoon.

RCMP said Cowichan Indian Reserve constable Brian Thorne's car was demolished in the accident at Indian Road railroad tracks.

Victorians Answer Channel 9 Drive

The success of Seattle's Channel 9 membership drive will mean the publicly owned station can continue to broadcast seven days a week says Bob Hermer.

The education-information station held an on-the-air membership drive for eight evenings ending Sunday. The drive aimed at a goal of 10,000 memberships which would enable the station to continue weekend broadcasting and replace "ancient" equipment.

The station, on the University of Washington campus, is believed to have received pledges of up to $70,000 in the eight days.

Hermer, the station's director of development, said today the drive received "strong support from Canadian viewers especially in the Victoria and Vancouver areas."

"We are concerned about our Canadian friends and strongly committed to Canadian viewers," Hermer said. He says the station hopes to film a program on location about the danger to Vancouver Island from oil spills.

Hermer said the station is in the process of drafting its first increased budget in 18 years. The station has operated on a $500,000 budget since it opened in 1955.

One-third of the increased budget will have to be obtained from viewers and community corporations. The remaining two-thirds will come from governments and the University of Washington.

He said the success of the membership drive means the station will be able to obtain matching grants from U.S. government agencies. Part of the money will be used to replace equipment bought second-hand 18 years ago.

"The only place you can see equipment like ours is in old textbooks," Hermer said.

He says newspaper articles about the Charlie Chaplin films featured during the eight-day period and stories are "largely responsible for the success of the membership drive."

"We don't have any money for advertising."

The drive brought an added dividend. An elderly viewer called to say he had shared the vaudeville circuit with Chaplin and taught him to rollerskate for the film The Rink more than 55 years ago.

Railway Bracing For Vandal Upswing

EDMONTON (CP) — Northern Alberta Railway is bracing for its usual spring counterattacks against vandalism, says K. R. Perry, the railway's general manager.

There is an upsurge in vandalism each spring, Perry said, with trains stoned and shot at and rocks, bridge timbers and other objects placed on rails.

Perry said most of the vandalism is petty and juvenile but there is a distinct problem with mischief obviously caused by adults.

The problem was serious enough in northern Alberta to warrant strong precautions to protect crews and property.

"In certain areas we have made liaison with the RCMP and have equipped their stations with our own radios. And we have standing orders out to train crews in certain locations to keep a sharp lookout."

Perry says trains have been uncoupled on isolated sidings and even in busy downtown rail yards. Crews in some areas had been threatened and attacked.

In one incident, an automobile engine block was placed on the track and other engine parts carefully placed to pose an additional hazard.

"A passing motorist happened to notice it and alerted our crews. His alertness saved us from what could have been a most serious accident."

Perry said it was common in the past for yard lights and signals to be shot at and destroyed. These were gradually replaced with reflectors which were not susceptible to damage.

"What we've tried to do is make less attractive targets."

He says on certain sections of routes crews are under orders to keep away from window areas to avoid possible injury from rocks or bullets.

The locations of vandalism were quite isolated and it was difficult for crews to identify the attackers.

"We expect at least one report a month," Perry says. Many of the less serious incidents, where no damage was involved, were not usually reported by railway personnel.

Saanich Aldermen Vote Pay Hike for Themselves

Saanich aldermen Monday raised their indemnities to a total of $9,926, then weeded $48,500 from the 1973 municipal budget estimates in their first three-hour session.

Facing a proposed 5.69 mill increase in the tax levy, the mayor and council cut less than one-third of a mill in reviewing estimates of four departments.

Another session is scheduled for tonight and a third on Wednesday.

The motion for larger indemnities came early in the discussion, after aldermen had gone over estimated revenues, and was put forward by Ald. Alan Newberry as attention turned to expenditures for general government services.

Newberry asked for $3,500 each for aldermen and $11,000 for the mayor, compared to a current $2,556 for aldermen and $8,626 for mayor.

Ald. Leslie Passmore, Frank Waring and William Campbell opposed the motion, but it carried with Mayor Hugh Curtis, and Ald. Edith Gunning, William Noel, Fred Severson and John McDonald voting with Newberry.

Passmore said he was "appalled at the way we are going down the road to destruction by inflation.

"Somewhere we've got to say stop it."

Council should give leadership, he said.

Campbell said he supported Passmore: that he would consent to a "small increase, but not near to 50 per cent."

Passmore, a veteran of more than 30 years on council, said he had worked out that at the federal guideline of 6.5 per cent, his original $200 indemnity would have become more than $24,000 a year by now.

"It shows what a fantastic increase you get. You are doubling the doubling."

McDonald said he did not think aldermen could afford to serve without being remunerated at the proposed level.

Saanich pays below the B.C. average, he said.

Gunning said she had previously taken the position that council should show leadership by keeping increases to a minimum, as an example to the municipal employees to show restraint.

"But it doesn't matter what we do here," she said. "Council has failed to impose any restraint on employee groups.

"We are indeed falling behind," Gunning said. A modest increase in indemnities would have little or no effect on the over-all budget.

The job is not "something you can do in odds and ends of your time. It cuts seriously into the week."

Remuneration should allow for people of all means to run for council, or else council will be limited to the wealthy or retired, Gunning declared.

Curtis read from a table of council salaries since 1963 when aldermen were paid $1,800 and the mayor $4,200, two-thirds of which was indemnity and one-third expense money.

Today the B.C. average for communities of 50,000 or more population (excluding Saanich and Vancouver) is $15,100 for mayors and $3,500 for aldermen.

The Canadian average, he said, is $3,278 for aldermen and $12,356 for mayors.

Waring said when he first ran for council he was not aware aldermen received pay.

"I felt it was my duty to put something back in the pot" in the form of service, he said.

"If I were paid for my time, I wouldn't sell it for $3,500," Waring added.

When the motion passed, Passmore said:

"If anyone is going to ask me whether I'm going to turn back the increase, the answer is no."

Council took the largest bite from anticipated social service costs for welfare benefits, reducing the amount from $831,500 to $797,400.

Passmore asked welfare administrator John Gibson if there was any way the municipality could get anything back in the form of work by welfare recipients who are able-bodied.

"I think they'd work if offered a job," Gibson replied. But only about 82 of those on welfare are employable, representing about 10 per cent, he said.

"We can't do it, I'm quite sure, but I want to know why. Is it undignified?" Passmore asked.

Curtis said he could not agree with such a simplistic outlook, drawing attention to the 90 per cent of cases who are sick, elderly, unemployable.

"Yes, there are abuses; yes, there are oversights; yes, there are those who shouldn't get it," the mayor said. But he was sick of arguing over it.

Fire department estimates lost only $1,350 of an estimated $1.18 million expenditure and a motion to cut back another $10,800 for an additional inspector and car failed by a 6-3 vote.

A total $8,250 was cut from capital spending proposals of indoor recreation, and $3,900 surplus from a previous allocation was returned to revenue.

Finally, at the suggestion of the mayor, supported by Newberry, the golf course management committee was instructed to examine the price for retailing a bottle of beer at Cedar Hill club house.

Forty-five cents was not enough to charge, Curtis said.

Alaska Trip Postponed

Project Quest, a field trip to Alaska conceived by Sooke high school teacher Tom Dykes, has been postponed.

The plan to charter CP ferry Princess Patricia for a five-day, 300-student study voyage, fell prey to early deadlines.

"We got the numbers," Dykes said, "but we didn't have enough money paid up and we couldn't go on speculation. It was a matter of time."

The project was scheduled to set sail May 2 with the approval, but not the financial support, of Sooke school board and various levels of government.

Invitations to join the charter voyage were sent to 450 school districts in Western Canada but Dykes said he got replies from only two.

LETTERS

"It was only through the media that teachers from all across Canada learned about the project and then we started getting letters from people who were interested," Dykes said. "But then we were faced with these deadlines."

Dykes said 150 Grade 11 and 12 students had paid their $225 for the trip and another 60 had committed themselves with promisory notes.

He said the trip has been postponed rather than cancelled and he plans to meet the teachers, UVic faculty members and museum workers who intended to go on the voyage to work out a new departure date, perhaps next fall.

The project called for continual field studies as the ferry journeyed up the coast and shipboard laboratories set up for inter-disciplinary study in geography, biology, ecology, anthropology and oceanography.

NEW PAPER FOR CITY

Victorians found an introductory issue of The Free Press, a new weekly newspaper, on their doorsteps Monday.

Starting April 23, the paper will be published weekly and distributed free to 60,000 homes. The publisher is Dan Heffernan, defeated independent candidate in the last federal election. Bill Lever, 24, former editor of The Hope Standard, is editor and chief writer.

Lever said Monday that response from people in government, journalism, universities and community action groups has been encouraging.

The Free Press will concentrate on current issues, politics and social problems, but will also offer features and community news. The first edition features an interview with heroin addicts.

And, according to Lever, the new paper has the lowest rates in Victoria for advertising.

Red Cross Gets Emergency Role

The responsibility for voluntary aspects of emergency measures in case of disaster in British Columbia is gradually being transferred to the Red Cross, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Sunday.

He told the 54th annual council meeting of the Canadian Red Cross Society, B.C.-Yukon Division, the change is long overdue.

He said as long as the original objective of the emergency welfare program had been to prepare for the protection of the population and continuity of government in the event of war its administration by the provincial government was a sensible arrangement.

The emphasis has changed, he said, adding that "almost all the activities of the branch are directed toward preparedness to cope and deal with civil emergencies."

He said it wouldn't make sense to have two agencies competing for the large numbers of volunteers necessary to deal with civil emergencies.

Under the new agreement, he said, the Red Cross will be responsible for registering disaster victims, answering inquiries about such victims and arranging to feed, house and clothe them.

Dr. J. W. Thomas of West Vancouver was elected president, succeeding Dr. Olga Jardine of Victoria.

MB to Spend Millions On Curbing Pollution

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. today announced two major pollution control projects to cost an estimated $11.4 million.

MacMillan Bloedel plans to spend $9.2 million at the Powell River mill to capture fine wood fibres and chemical solids which cannot be recycled and prevent them from entering the ocean.

The solids will be incinerated or used for land fill.

The company will spend $2.2 million at the Port Alberni mill to reduce odor, to prevent particulate matter from entering the air, and to "cut periodic losses of solids and chemicals from the mill's processing system."

Drowning Victim Was Drinking

Greater Victoria coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ruled Monday that a 58-year-old Victoria man's drowning in the inner Harbor was caused by his own negligence.

He made the ruling after an inquiry into the death of James Douglas Harte, whose body was found early March 27 in the harbor between the coast guard cutter Racer and the federal transport department wharf at 203 Harbor where the ship was berthed.

A cook-steward aboard the Racer, Harte was last seen leaving her late March 26, about 12 hours after she returned from coastal patrol.

The coroner said the negligence finding resulted from medical tests that showed Harte was "partially drunk." How Harte fell in is not known.

From eastern Canada, Harte signed on the ship March 14.

FRENCH IMMERSION STUDENTS 'BY LOT'

One hundred kindergarten students out of 237 applicants will be chosen "by lot" to attend Greater Victoria school board's experimental French immersion program next September.

The board's instruction committee agreed Monday to seek department of education approval for the French-language kindergarten classes and to re-affirm the applications received.

The committee was informed that 100 positions would be available at four half-day kindergartens in the district.

Two classes will be held at Richmond Elementary . . . one offering 100 per cent instruction in French, the other half instruction in English and half in French.

Two other classes, both offering French and English on a 50-50 basis, will be held at Cloverdale Elementary.

Assistant instruction director Ted Callbeck told the committee the first year of the program, planned as an eight-year experiment to Grade 7, will cost the board about $25 per student over regular school costs.

These extra costs, he said, will probably be covered by French support grants from the department of education.

Callbeck said Richmond and Cloverdale schools were chosen for classes because of their central location in regards to transportation routes.

He said some applications may be withdrawn because of the locations of the schools but if there are still more than 100 applicants, names will be chosen by lot.

Tutoring Plan Vetoed by Trustees

A proposal by Victoria Self Help Society to establish tutoring programs for children of low-income families was given the cold shoulder by a Greater Victoria school board committee Monday.

The committee told Mrs. Judith McCandless, prospective director of the program, she would have to gather more information, investigate some possible problems and study a few alternatives before they could consider her proposal.

The school board's administration had already recommended against the program.

The "Out Reach Tutoring" project, as outlined by Mrs. McCandless in a brief presented to the committee, would involve volunteers going into children's homes to tutor and "set up realistic home study programs."

The low-income child with schooling problems, she says, often cannot receive help from his parents "because of their own low level of formal education and, in some cases, their own personal adjustment problems."

"His home rarely possesses the educational resources necessary for home study," says the Out Reach brief.

"The tutor's main objective will be to set up a rewarding learning experience for the child to whom he is assigned."

Initially 20 UVic education students would be used as tutors.

The only paid employee would be Mrs. McCandless, as director, and her salary, along with yearly expenses for the project, would total $11,638.

Director of Instruction John Wiens said "we agree with the value of the proposal in terms of rational and objectives but we're concerned about financing."

Wiens said the school district's Learning Assistance Centre is filling much the same function and he was concerned about "proliferation" of programs.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore asked Mrs. McCandless if she had applied for federal grants, as other education projects in the city had done, and said if the school board pays the cost of the project it would then have jurisdiction over it.

Trustee Philip Ney suggested the B.C. Teachers' Federation might object to the Out Reach plan to later hire unemployed teachers at low rates of pay.

"And I don't think we'll get any more mileage out of university students, said Wiens, referring to the education students who already work at the Learning Assistance Centre."

Only trustee Daphne Temple voiced firm support for the project.

"This is just the area we should be getting into.

"It's long overdue when you think over 12 per cent of the children in schools have learning problems, let alone mental problems," she added.

Temple suggested Victoria Self Help Society should approach the provincial government for funding.

'Skullduggery' Skills New School Course?

"Skullduggery" studies may soon be on the curriculum at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary.

Greater Victoria school board instruction committee Monday recommended approval of two locally-developed courses, scheduled to begin in September.

In reference to the recent struggle with the department of education over a locally developed political studies course, Trustee Lavinia Greenwood suggested an anthropology 10 course might have to change its name "since it sounds too much like a university course."

"How about 'Digs'," someone said.

"Or 'Skullduggery'," another trustee replied.

NAME STAYS

Despite cries of glee from the committee, its was decided to recommend submission of the course without any descriptive name change.

Thirty students will be allowed to enrol in the proposed course, which will be taught by S. J. Willis teacher Denis St. Clare, a practising archaeologist.

The objectives outlined in the course syllabus include study of man's physical and mental development; study of the evolution of cultures; investigation of the prehistoric cultures of Canada with heavy emphasis on B.C.; and investigation of archaeological techniques.

The other course recommended for approval is Consumer Education 10, proposed by teacher James Thornton at Highrock Junior Secondary.

"In the curriculum department we think this is a step forward in the direction we want to take," said instruction director Victor Thompson.

The course proposes to help the student understand the motives of consumer purchase; recognize the role of the consumer in the economy; understand the role of advertising; and develop effective techniques of consumer purchasing.

Trustee Harry Graham drew laughs from other committee members when he asked: "Would this course encourage students to buy a lot of things on consumer credit or teach them to live within their own income?"

DIAL-A-BUS SYSTEM URGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wally Atkinson of Regina said he will ask the British Columbia government to approve a dial-a-bus pilot project for Greater Vancouver.

Atkinson, manager of urban transit systems for N. D. Lea and Associates Ltd., introduced dial-a-bus to Regina in September, 1971. He recently resigned as manager of the Regina Transit System.

Under the scheme, when someone wants a bus he telephones the dispatch office and within 30 minutes a mini-bus picks him up at his front door.

Atkinson said the dial-a-bus system also has possibilities in Victoria and Kelowna.

Liquor Drunk

SURREY (CP) — The times must be changing — liquor was consumed at Parent-Teacher Association dance at James Ardiel Elementary.

The Surrey School Board recently relaxed liquor roles to permit a bar to be set up in a school by any adult community group using the facilities. Board chairman Garry Watkins said he saw no one drunk and behavior was on a "high level."

Growers Organize

KEREMEOS (CP) — The United Fruit Growers of British Columbia, a new organization of Okanagan fruit growers, has launched a program to establish a B.C. fruit marketing commission to "put economic viability back into the fruit industry." Hans Rhenisch, head of the organization, said the group plans to present a brief to the B.C. government seeking legislation to allow the proposed commission.

Meeting Ordered

SURREY (CP) — Health Minister Dennis Cocke has ordered the board of trustees of Surrey Memorial Hospital and fired administrator Ian Manning to meet him in Victoria Thursday.

If they still fail to reach agreement, Cocke said in a written statement, "I shall be compelled to place a public administrator in the hospital."

Tug Salvaged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Tug Swiftsure II arrived at Burrard Shipyards after it was salvaged Saturday. The boat sank in 30 feet of water last week after it hit Denham Islet, northeast of Campbell River.

Voyageur Programs Expanded

Two new Young Voyageur student travel programs are planned for British Columbia this summer including an exchange trip for physically-handicapped students.

A group of 20 handicapped students will be among 640 young people in B.C. to participate in the federally-sponsored exchange program with other parts of Canada.

The handicapped students, four of them in wheelchairs, will participate in a seven to 10-day B.C.-Manitoba exchange.

The other new program will see a group of 20 West Vancouver students spending five weeks with a group of Montreal students in a French-English immersion project. Two weeks will be spent in Quebec, one in Ottawa and two weeks in B.C.

Oak Bay Tackles Flood Problem

Oak Bay Council's B Committee Monday gave initial approval to a budget of roughly $600,000 for capital works, about $100,000 more than the 1972 expenditure.

Largest single item in the budget, which will later have to be approved by the estimates committee, is $175,000 for surface drains.

Municipal engineer - planner Geoffrey White had originally suggested $100,000. This was later amended to $175,000, the other $75,000 being taken from money earmarked to do the first stage of work on Bowker Creek. This will now be postponed.

The committee decided on the change after White told them, "it is going to take $200,000 over the next year or so to solve the problem flooding)."

Ald. Douglas McLelland said last year when council was concerned about flooding it established five priority areas.

"Promises were made to the public and money must be spent to comply with that undertaking," he added.

Another large chunk of the budget — $172,034 — is earmarked for various road improvements. It is proposed to spend $77,500 on improving Hampshire from Bowker Creek to Cranmore, as part of the municipality's arterial road improvement programs.

Another $37,000 is earmarked for Mitchell, $4,500 for a Cadboro Bay and Beach sight line, $11,000 for Hazel, $37,000 for Zela and $12,034 for the municipality's share of a Midland Road subdivision.

The sum of $54,700 is suggested for work on water mains, $13,600 for two-inch main replacements on Estevan west of Cadboro Bay, Hazel, Plumer and Runnymede.

The sum of $31,000 will be used for strengthening of pressure to fire hydrants on Newport from Island to Beach and Newport to 514 Beach, and rock blasting.

Dealing with a request from the Oak Bay Lawn Bowling Club that a chain link fence be supplied by Oak Bay at a cost of $960, Ald. Douglas Watts said the club had been most co-operative in getting the facilities it needed.

The committee will recommend the club be asked to share 50 per cent of the fence's cost.

The committee will also recommend the municipality provide an extension of water service connections at a cost of $300.

Approval of a request from the Oak Bay Kiwanis Housing Society that $6,302 be spent on work to improve the approach on Milton to the society's low-income senior housing project was also recommended. The work will be completed this month.

The money will be spent on providing a curb and five-foot concrete walk from Elgin to the eastern driveway of the property, a curb along the remainder of the property, regrading the boulevard, road widening and repairing.

Two items put in the budget for Henderson Park gymnasium were tabled until White could make a further report. One for $3,300 for portable bleachers to seat 120 people was tabled after Ald. John Goult questioned the need for so much spectator space.

The other, $3,000 for a centre curtain, was tabled after White told the committee this was a much cheaper curtain than the one recommended by the architect and would act simply as a visual divider and would not reduce noise.

GOOD MANNERS URGED

Ald. Douglas McLelland Monday called for "good manners" to be used on Oak Bay's tennis courts in order to cut down complaints of people "hogging" the courts.

McLelland, chairman of council's parks and recreation committee, said he has received many complaints that players were using the courts for more than one set at a time and practising when other players were waiting their turn.

"Simply observing good manners would solve the problem," he said.

He suggested that perhaps a charge be made as a means of controlling play.

Ald. Douglas Watts said employing staff for this would be "uneconomic" and suggested players be asked to sign a register at the courts which would note the time they began play.

In other business, the parks and recreation committee agreed to recommend a change in the bylaw requiring dogs to be leashed in Uplands Park during May and June to include April in order to protect nesting birds.

Chief John Green said July should also be included.

The committee decided provision be made in the bylaw that "if evidence is brought forward that there is a great deal of nesting in July" it could be amended to also include July.

Dogs are banned from Oak Bay's public beaches from June 1 to Sept. 30.

46 Competitors, Few Spectators At Major Event

A full day of highland dancing — new in this year's Victoria Music Festival — drew 46 competitors Monday from under nine years to over 15.

But few highland dance buffs, either Scottish or Sassenach, found their way to Newcombe Auditorium to see spirited performances, frequently combined with excellent style and technical achievement, that kept adjudicator Heather (Duncan) Jolley reaching for superlatives.

One or more top-rated entrants from this section will be included in tonight's folk dance honor performance at Central Junior auditorium where groups from various schools, chosen by last week's adjudicator J. Belford, will put on a colorful display. Starting time is 8.

Strings and orchestras held the stage at Oak Bay Junior Monday and today, with the senior solo championship and the Congress of Strings event scheduled for tonight.

OPEN TO STRINGS

Biggest award in the festival, the Congress scholarship, is open to string players between 16 and 22 and takes the winner, all expenses paid, to study at the Congress of Strings, University of California, Los Angeles, for six weeks.

It is presented through the Victoria musicians Union.

Sole entrant this year is 19-year-old cellist Rolf Gilstein, who Monday accumulated a high aggregate of marks in various classes.

For two movements of a Bach unaccompanied solo, for example, he was awarded a total of 180 marks by Brandon adjudicator Francis Chaplin. And in the open cello and piano sonata class, teamed with Susan de Burgh in a Beethoven performance, another 90 was awarded.

Accordion and guitar classes began today at Newcombe Auditorium and there will be more accordion Wednesday morning and early afternoon.

School choirs continue at Victoria Senior until Thursday noon.

Besides the folk dance program tonight, two major evening programs remain in this year's festival — the schools honor performance, Friday at Central Junior and the Festival Highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse, Saturday, when Rose Bowl and Medallion winners and other outstanding soloists and ensembles will present a program.

NEW BILL SOON ON MERGERS

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Monday he intends to introduce a bill "in the next day or two" empowering the cabinet to order amalgamation of local areas without plebiscites.

British Columbia Supreme Court ruled recently that the municipal affairs minister cannot order the amalgamation of Kamloops and Kelowna with their respective suburbs without a vote.

Lorimer said Monday the court decision was based on existing law, not new legislation of the kind he is proposing.

"I don't think there is any change," he said.

"When I discussed the amalgamation issue (involving Kamloops and Kelowna) I said there would have to be legislation brought in, and there will be legislation brought in," said Lorimer.

Thousands Flee Waves

Roof-top level waves pound walls of new subdivision fronting Lake Ontario

Times News Services

Pounding waves pushed by gusting winds forced the evacuation of thousands of families on both the Canadian and U.S. sides of Lakes Erie and Ontario today.

While the Canadian evacuations were carried out smoothly, troops were called in on the U.S. side of Lake Erie to prevent looting of abandoned homes.

Hardest hit was the Windsor area where an estimated 1,600 abandoned their homes when easterly winds reached 50 miles an hour. The winds began a westerly shift today but hundreds of families did not return.

In Toledo, winds pushed water from western Lake Erie into city and suburban streets and flooded neighboring shoreline communities. Water was two feet deep in some streets.

MUCH DAMAGE

About 500 were evacuated in Toledo and, although there were no reports of injuries, officials said damage would be considerable.

The water level dropped several feet early today.

There were requests from some western Ontario townships for the use of troops in flood control, and in the Ontario legislature Liberal Richard Ruston of Essex-Kent asked that the province be declared a major disaster area so that federal aid could be provided.

Flooding on the north shore of Lake Erie extended from the mouth of the Detroit River, 50 miles east to Erieau.

Many residents had to flee their homes for the third time in six months. Earlier storms forced them out last November and last month.

About 1,000 residents in Mersea Township, near Lake Erie, were evacuated. At least 30 cottages, some of them new, were lost in one stretch of shoreline, said Reeve Clinton Tofflemire.

HOMES FLOODED

He said only one of the cottages was occupied and it was safely evacuated.

Another 100 homes in subdivisions were flooded, he said, and at least 750 acres of prime farmland flooded and another 1,500 acres threatened as a major dike in the area broke down.

Some residential parts of Mersea township were under six feet of water.

With nowhere for its water to empty, the Detroit River backed up halfway to Lake St. Clair, creating the most serious flooding so far along its shores.

At La Salle, water reached the centre of the community one-quarter of a mile from the river.

Flooding was reported in parts of Windsor itself, where a section of Riverside Drive was closed, and in lakefront communities on the south shore of Lake St. Clair, where some persons had to be evacuated as early as Saturday.

HIGH WAVES

High waves broke through the rebuilt dikes on the east side of Pelee Island, flooding about 500 acres of farmland.

Saltfleet Township council declared a state of emergency in that community at the western tip of Lake Ontario.

Lakeshore residents in the Toronto area watched the strips of land between their homes and Lake Ontario grow still narrower as five-foot waves added to soil erosion.

Meanwhile a spring storm sweeping the midwestern U.S. dumped up to 18 inches of snow and brought new dangers to weakened levees along the rain-swollen Mississippi River system.

In Kaskasia Island, 60 miles south of St. Louis, five-foot waves and 60-mile-an-hour winds forced evacuation of all but 16 of the island's 300 residents.

So far, seven million acres of land along the Mississippi system are under water, 6,000 families have been evacuated and damage has reached $160 million.

B.C. Eyes More Parks For Boaters

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Creation of a series of marine parks in British Columbia inland waters from the Gulf Islands through to Prince Rupert, was proposed today by Resource Minister Robert Williams.

Parks in the government's tentative marine park program include:

Two on West Redonda Island — Roscoe Bay and Walsh Cove;

Three parks on Cortez Island—Carrington Bay, Squirrel Cove and Von Donop Inlet;

Two in the vicinity of Rivers Inlet and one at Kingcome Inlet, situated north of Campbell River.

Surveys are being conducted in other areas, the minister said.

"We have one of the most beautiful inland waters in the world," he said. "It is essential that we plan now to preserve key areas on those islands for the people of this province."

PRIVATELY-OWNED

The minister admitted that the Gulf Islands presented a difficulty as most of the land is privately-owned — some by large corporations, foreign and Canadian.

But he emphasized that more marine parks would be established in the Gulf Islands to complement those already heavily used by both Canadian and U.S. boaters.

"The Gulf Islands are vitally important because of their close proximity to the densely populated east coast of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland," he said.

DESOLATION SOUND

The new government's first marine park, announced Monday, is at Desolation Sound, a 22-square-mile area situated 19 nautical miles from Campbell River.

Widely known for its warm waters and scenic anchorages — Grace Harbor, Prideaux and Tenedos Bay — the park's winding waterways are safe for trailer boats and even canoes. It includes freshwater lakes and 6,653 miles of foreshore.

Crash Kills 106

Times News Services

BASEL — A British charter airliner carrying 139 tourists to Basel's spring fair crashed and exploded in a blizzard today.

Police announced 106 persons were killed.

Some of the 40 survivors escaped without injury, police said.

The Unicorn Travel Agency in England, which organized the flight, said 90 per cent of the passengers were women, on a day trip to the Swiss fair.

The plane, on a flight from Bristol, crashed five minutes before it was scheduled to land.

Farmers interviewed by Swiss radio said 20 persons on the ground were injured when pieces of the plane struck a farmhouse.

The entire area was isolated by power and telephone failures.

The plane approached Basel airport from the north for an instrument-aided landing in heavy snowfall.

Then, the airport said, the pilot pulled up and roared away to the south disappearing quickly in the blinding snow. Ten minutes later radio contact broke off.

The Swiss army and police joined in the rescue efforts hampered by deep snow.

Rescuers reached the crash area on foot. Survivors were flown out by helicopters.

In Stuttgart, West Germany five persons were killed when a twin-engine aircraft crashed also during a snow storm near that city's Echterdingen airport today.

The aircraft burst into flames after crashing by the side of a busy motorway.

Police said it appeared to encounter difficulties shortly after takeoff for Brussels. The pilot had attempted an emergency landing.

HE LEFT POLICE DUMBFOUNDED

GLASGOW (UPI) — James Burke, 18, spent the weekend in jail awaiting trial on charges of disturbing the peace because, police said, he was "bawling, shouting and screaming" at a soccer match Saturday.

The court dismissed the charge Monday when it learned Burke is deaf and dumb.

SPILL PACT SIGNED BY CANADA, U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A contingency plan for oil spills on the East and West coasts has been reached with the United States, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Davis told reporters after a meeting with Russell Train, chairman of the U.S. president's council on environmental quality, that the agreement extends current provisions for the Great Lakes to coastal waters.

Davis said the coastal oil spill contingency plan involves oil tanker routes, navigational aids to prevent spill disasters and methods of cleaning up spills.

Train said the two groups discussed only the environmental problems of the oil-tanker route. He said he supports President Nixon's preference for the Alaska pipeline and West Coast tanker route over alternative methods of transporting Alaskan oils.

The environment minister said the oil spill contingency plan would apply particularly to the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Georgia Strait.

Envoys Order Families Out

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — Diplomatic sources said today three foreign embassies, faced with dwindling supplies and a threatened Communist attack on Phnom Penh on Friday, have ordered all dependents temporarily out of the capital.

Word of the evacuation came as a U.S. embassy spokesman said Washington had approved an airlift of fuel supplies to ease critical shortages caused by encirclement of the capital by Communist troops.

The sources said the evacuation of the British, Japanese and Israeli embassies will be completed by Friday — the Buddhist new year.

They said the evacuation was prompted not only by security problems, but also because of shortages of fuel, power blackouts and a shrinking water supply.

Military intelligence reports indicate that Communist units now operating within a 15-mile radius of the capital are planning to launch a combined rocket and sapper attack on the capital in celebration of the new year.

The Vietnam truce supervising organization said today it is halting all of its helicopter flights indefinitely, apparently because of a helicopter downed Saturday over territory controlled by Communists.

Nine men, one of them a Canadian died in the crash.

A spokesman read newsmen a one-sentence statement announcing the decision, but did not elaborate on the reasons.

Meanwhile, two Canadian officers crossed the Thach Han River at Quang Tri today to begin an investigation on the crash.

The investigators are expected to spend about two days in the bush in the northwest corner of the country where the Viet Cong maintain armed control.

The Viet Cong have described the crash as an "accident."

Israelis Raid Beirut

Times News Services

Israeli commandos stormed into the heart of Beirut today, killing three top Palestinian guerrilla leaders in their apartment and launching lightning attacks on refugee camps.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam announced the resignation of his government following an emergency cabinet meeting to discuss the pre-dawn attack.

The troops landed on beaches near Beirut, sped into the city in six U.S.-built cars rented earlier by Israeli secret agents, and later escaped by plane and helicopter.

It was the first Israeli strike into the heart of Beirut and the Israeli chief of staff said it was a reprisal raid that struck a "serious blow" to the guerrilla movement.

The Lebanese said the raid showed no one is safe from Israeli aggression.

The troops blasted their way into two apartment buildings in the centre of Beirut with machine guns and killed Kamal Nasser, spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization, and Al Fatah leaders Kamal Adwan and Mohammed Najjar.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir called a special session of parliament in Jerusalem to consider recent Arab guerrilla attacks against the Israelis and government communique disclosed for the first time Rome police had foiled an Arab attempt to hijack an El Al airliner there last week.

"It was very marvellous because we killed the murderers who were planning to murder again," she told parliament. "Shining pages will be written about this."

The Israeli guerrillas today also attacked a refugee camp at Sabra which houses 5,000 Palestinians, and said at least 30 persons were killed. Residents were searching the debris of blown-up buildings for more bodies.

One of the buildings attacked was the headquarters of the Maoist Popular Democratic Front.

The raiders went on to the Dikwaneh camp, which houses 8,000 refugees, and blew up a factory, police said. Guerrillas immediately surrounded the area and refused entry to Lebanese authorities.

An army lieutenant in Sidon said the Israelis landed there from the sea and blew up three cars inside the garage of a gas station and an empty shed alongside.

The Israeli chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. David Elazar, said in Tel Aviv that two Israelis were killed in the 2½-hour raid and two were wounded. He warned that Israel my hit Beirut again, saying: "It is impossible to honor the sovereignty of Lebanon and its capital when there is complete freedom for the terrorists, their bases and commands in Lebanese territory."

The guerrilla leadership issued a later statement saying the killing of the three leaders was carried out by agents of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, that it was an inside job and that report of Israeli planes and helicopters were just a coverup.

The Israeli raid came 12 hours after guerrilla attacks in Nicosia which left one Arab dead and three others wounded.

In Nicosia today, police were placed on full alert to prevent a recurrence of Monday's violence resulting from the guerrilla attacks.

Prior to the attacks in Cyprus, more than 30 bombs exploded and there was scattered shooting that President Archbishop Makarios blamed on Cypriot extremists.

No More Bargain Gas: Nimsick

B.C. cannot continue to export its natural gas to foreign markets at "bargain basement prices" when there is only 10 years supply left, Mines Minister and Petroleum Resources minister Lee Nimsick said today.

Nimsick announced that he has arranged a special meeting with officials of the National Energy Board to express the NDP government's concern about the low price and high quality of natural gas being exported.

The meeting will take place Friday in Ottawa, where Nimsick will be attending a federal conference of mines ministers.

Nimsick said he is "deeply concerned" about the state of natural gas reserves left in the province. Natural gas supplies will last no longer than 1983 he said, "a mere 10 years."

The minister added that even if the historical rate of natural gas discoveries is taken into account, "there will not be sufficient supplies to meet domestic and export demands beyond 1989."

"We are facing the very grim picture of running out of gas in less than 20 years, while we continue to deliver this non-replenishable resource to the United States at rates that amount to a give-away," he said.

Nimsick blamed the situation on a "lack of foresight" by the former Social Credit government and lack of action on the part of federal authorities such as the National Energy Board.

Nimsick said present NEB regulations provide that the export price of natural gas cannot be set at less than 105 per cent of the domestic price being charged.

"Instead of using this level as a floor, the NEB has been using it as a ceiling when the level should have been no less than 150 per cent," he said.

"We cannot support continued gas exports at current terms, when today's proved resources will be used up in 10 years."

Nimsick criticized a special rate on natural gas being given to El Paso Natural Gas, an American customer of B.C.'s Westcoast Transmission. The price charged for B.C.'s gas should reflect rising prices at B.C. and other North American wellheads, he said.

The minister added that all gas exports should be permitted only where future domestic needs are satisfactorily met.

He said B.C. residents in the Kootenays are on danger of becoming victims to the proposed two-price policy being considered by Alberta. B.C.'s domestic consumers are already paying twice the price for natural gas that Albertans have to pay, he said.

"British Columbians will become foreigners from the point of view of Alberta's Conservative government," he said.

Nimsick termed the B.C. government's position on additional exports of natural gas according to present or proposed terms as one of "solid opposition."

'God Of Death' Skull Just Stares

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The head sits on a black velvet box in the attic staring vacantly at whoever comes up the stairs. The light from the window shines directly into the depths of its core.

The 35-pound skull sculpted of crystal rock by the Aztecs possibly as long ago as 800 AD and unearthed in Mexico is the possession of Charles P. Smith of Victoria.

The piece of art is one of five in the world said to have mystical powers and valued by at least one owner as worth at least $250,000.

Smith is realistic about the value of the skull, appreciates it for its art form and violently disagrees with the supernatural powers attributed to skulls of its kind by Anna Mitchell-Hedges, of Kitchener, Ont., in a recently published Weekend Magazine article.

★

Smith calls the skull The God of Death and he bought it during a visit to Texcoco from a Mexican who had unearthed it at an excavation site.

Smith, until now, had no idea about its value.

"They're rare. You couldn't get it by going down to Mexico these days. Everything has changed. The Mexicans working on excavations didn't use to make much and so they'd take these things hide them in their huts and try to sell them to people like me."

"A Mexican came up to me carrying this skull in his knapsack — they knew I was interested in this sort of thing — and asked me if I wanted it.

"I couldn't understand where he had unearthed it or what it meant to him, but I took it," said Smith.

"It nearly burst my eyes when he took it out."

It's similar, in some ways, to the Skull of Doom; owned by Miss Mitchell-Hedges, now in the Museum of the North American Indian in New York.

Hers, however, according to the article, causes people's pulse to quicken, is hypnotic, powerful and "will not be mocked or jeered."

"If he gets into evil hands," said Miss Mitchell-Hedges," he could do much evil.

She believes implicitly in its power, would sell it for $250,000 if the buyer would donate it to a museum and will not describe any of details involved in her find, because she's writing a book on the subject.

She did say, however, it warns of great disasters. For instance, when President Kennedy died, "It was so wet, it was dripping," she said.

"It's an awful lot of baloney," says 84-year-old Smith, who has been collecting artifacts "for years and years."

He says the skulls were a sign of death and were buried along with corpses. Made out of pure rock crystal, it must have taken over 100 years "for the Aztecs to carve it, without metal tools — just twirled or throng spun and drilled with sand abrasives."

"But I've had this skull for quite a number of years (30) and I'm still waiting for it to turn blue or something. Let's watch," he says facetiously.

One of the most important aspects of the God of Death is "that you can't scratch it with a knife. It's so hard. Here, take this and just try.

"See?

★

"If you're worried about a curse, $5 would just about do it and I promise you'd have nothing to worry about," he joked.

About the only odd or eerie characteristic of Smith's skull as it sits surrounded by other collectors' items in a small museum-like attic at 141 Howe, is that it's cold to touch.

And there have been no weird experiences since Smith brought it back to Canada, "except maybe with my grandchildren.

"It's funny when you get grandchildren staying here, downstairs gets pretty loaded with people and they have to sleep here in the attic.

"They don't like staying up here with the God of Death, so we have to cover it up. But that's about it," Smith said.

Experts estimate there are four of these skulls in the world: the Mitchell-Hedges one, and those located in a private collection in Italy, in the Louvre and in the British Museum.

What does he plan to do with the God of Death?

"If someone offered me just part of $250,000 I'd probably take it," he said, admitting he had sold most of his collectors' items that had been gathering in his attic after two trips around the world.

"Of course, if I wanted to, I could tell you stories about it you'd probably believe, but they wouldn't be true."

Go-Ahead for Rec Centre

Esquimalt Won't Hold Second Referendum

Esquimalt council Monday ordered the go-ahead on a community recreation centre that ratepayers rejected in a 1971 referendum.

Council unanimously passed a bylaw approving the borrowing of $1,050,000 to build the centre at the corner of Fraser and Lyall by Bullen Park.

A second referendum will not be held.

"By no stretch of the imagination could we ever get a better deal than this," Ald. Art Mebs said.

Under the new arrangements Esquimalt will end up paying about $450,000 to $500,000 of the total cost of the centre, said Mayor Art Young.

"This is less than the municipality had expected to pay for the same centre two years ago," he added.

The department of municipal affairs has approved a loan of $950,000 for the project under the Winter Capital Project Fund.

One-third of the loan will be paid by the province under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act, a saving for Esquimalt of $316,667.

The municipality will save another $200,000 through winter works grants covering all on-site labor costs between Dec. 1 and May 31 and half of all on-site labor costs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

"We told the people in 1971 it would cost four mills for operating and capital costs for the recreation centre," Young said.

Now, an increase of three mills to cover costs of the centre would be "an absolute outside figure," he added.

"I would bet my bottom dollar it would be under."

Construction is expected to begin next December and take about a year to complete.

An indoor swimming pool and an activity centre for senior citizens and other people will be major features.

"Two years ago this was put to the people in a referendum and it almost passed," said Ald. Terry Prentice.

In the February, 1971, referendum, 51 per cent of the voters approved the proposed $800,000 centre, but the referendum needed 60 per cent approval to pass.

Main reason for not having a second referendum was lack of time, Young said.

'Turn On' Requested For Big Office Towers

Representatives of Victoria's downtown businessmen say the city core faces stagnation because developers can't build big office towers.

Their official advisory committee voted Monday to call on city council to loosen up its density regulations and raise its building height restrictions or face erosion of its tax base.

"Three-to-one is such a low density it just doesn't pay to put up a building on expensive downtown land," said furniture store owner Tom Denny, whose motion was adopted.

The motion specifically called on council to:

—Review the commerical zone's new (June, 1972) floor space-to-land ratio of three-to-one and boost it to seven or even 10-to-one in the core area bounded by Government, Blanshard, Fisgard and Courtney.

—Increase the height limitation by an unspecified amount.

—Investigate the problems connected with development regulated by land-use contracts.

—Encourage landscaped setbacks to offset building height.

—Provide density bonuses to encourage developers to incorporate residential accommodation in buildings.

Downtown Business Association spokesman Lloyd Davies said he feared that if tough limitation on growth were maintained much longer some future pro-growth council might "take the brakes off" too fast and cause a sudden overgrowth.

Land-Use Contracts Best

Credit bureau operator Bob Ellis said he thought redevelopment could be best controlled through land-use contracts. Blanket rezoning would cause shoulder-to-shoulder office blocks to the detriment of the city, he said.

Denny argued that low density zoning had in the last five years "turned off" a major bank development, a group project by a trust company, a bank and an insurance company, and a project by a major insurance company.

"We're being carried away in our enthusiasm to retain the old," he told the nine members of the Downtown Business Advisory Committee's regular meeting at city hall.

We can't afford to be a quaint little museum-type city."

"If we're really serious about having residential accommodation downtown it'll just never pay on a three-to-one basis ... we'll have the cheapest, squarest, ugliest buildings possible."

Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said present low density zoning encouraged developers to tear down a whole block to make a project economic —"and it'll only be a big developer."

"The central business district will begin to decay or sprawl-the road we're on now," he said.

Denny said it was vital the city have a good tax base to justify costs of between $12.50 and $15 per square foot on downtown property.

Denser development did not have to make "a city of steel and glass," he said. "It can be done in an attractive way."

He cited Tacoma as an example of a city which had put brakes on downtown growth and driven business out of the city centre, creating urban sprawl.

Assistant Municipal Manager Colin Crisp said recommendations on downtown zoning were about to be made to city council by the advisory planning commission. He told Ellis city officials could not suggest to developers that land-use contracts were "a way round zoning policy."

(A three-to-one density means that floor space in a building totalled from its various storeys may be three times the area on which the building is located, allowing for setbacks.)

VICTORIANS KILLED IN KITIMAT CRASH

Two Victoria men were killed near Kitimat late Saturday night when the truck they were driving rolled over.

Douglas "Merv" Sneddon, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sneddon, 525 Dalton, and Ronald Fossey, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Fossey, 310 Langford, were about 12 miles out of Kitimat en route to Terrace when the accident happened, Kitimat RCMP said.

Both were employed at the Alcan in Kitimat.

Police said the mishap occurred on a private logging road.

Arrangements are being made to fly the bodies to Victoria. McCall Bros. are in charge of funeral arrangements.

Junk Patrol Ready to Roll

A tougher nuisance bylaw will help Saanich inspectors control accumulated junk throughout the municipality's 24,320 acres this summer.

Inspectors also will be coming down hard on weeds during June, July and August.

But as usual, residents will be persuaded, not squeezed, into compliance with the various bylaws and acts designed to keep the municipality looking its best and without risk of weed pollution in gardens and commercial crops.

Chief inspector, Eric Gravenor notes that under the noxious Weeds Bylaw Saanich deals with up to 300 complaints in a three-month season, yet rarely does a case reach the courts or force the corporation to charge weed removal to property taxes.

The new junk law is called the Unsightly Premises Bylaw, replacing the Nuisance Bylaw. An offender will no longer be able to claim stored material has value and therefore cannot be considered junk.

Council may view the premises and simply declare the material unsightly if the owner has not responded to the inspection staff's suggestion to clean-up.

Gravenor said staff attempts to enforce the laws uniformly and fairly, although for obvious reasons a strictly rural area will not be judged as harshly as a predominantly built-up area, except where noxious weeds are concerned.

Inspectors work in co-operation with the police and fire departments and besides the building and plumbing bylaws, they are concerned with zoning, fire hazards, abandoned materials such as old cars, and storage of volatiles for home occupations.

Zoning laws, for example, prohibit the storage of more than one unlicensed vehicle per household, unless it is in a garage or carport in residential zones.

Heritage Protection Powers 'Must Be Carefully Applied'

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf, a proponent of historic building preservation, said today proposed new powers for municipalities to protect heritage properties will be "very useful."

But he said the new measures, part of revisions to the provincial Municipal Act announced Monday, will "have to be applied very carefully so as not to put hardships on property owners."

Besides his political position, Bawlf is owner of several historic properties in Victoria's Old Town, among them the Law Chambers building and a section of Chinatown. He is also refurbishing the Belmont office building opposite the Empress Hotel.

Under the proposed amendment, municipalities will, with cabinet approval, be able to designate buildings or lands heritage properties "for the purpose of preserving evidences of the municipality's history."

Buildings will not be allowed to be demolished or changed without permission and lands will not be allowed to be built on.

"Basically it gives council a little bit more in the way of teeth in determining whether a heritage building should be torn down . . . gives them an opportunity to delay the proceedings and perhaps look at the economic viability of other uses," Bawlf said today.

He said he did not expect the powers to be applied to entire city areas such as James Bay or Fairfield, although he was not sure about the Old Town.

"To apply it to areas would be a misuse. It would have to be considered in respect of each building on its own merits or perhaps in the case of a limited area such as Old Town it could be considered in a broader application."

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said in announcing the amendment that it was meant particularly for Victoria. The city has for some time been pushing for such powers.

Vote on Arena Set for Sooke

A referendum seeking support for a proposed $486,000 ice-arena in the Sooke district should be held within two months, the area's capital regional board representative said today.

Howard Elder's prediction follows a meeting Monday, at which 400 area residents packed the Sooke Community Hall to discuss a proposal by the West Coast arena planning committee.

The committee, made up of a cross-section of Sooke residents, has studied plans for the arena during the last three months. It came up with proposals calling for a barebones structure, containing an ice sheet 85 by 200 feet, minimum support areas, change rooms, a snack bar, and first-aid room and seating for 200 to 300.

John Farmer, a Sooke druggist and spokesman for the group, said the proposal met with "overwhelming support."

Farmer said the arena was planned for a site as close to the schools as possible, adding the committee hopes a referendum would be held on or before June 12 "because we want fishermen in the area to be given an equal chance to vote on the question."

Elder, who also attended the Monday meeting, said he will take the request to the regional board with the committee's full brochure of material and "start the path towards the referendum."

"The regional board will have to examine its conscience carefully when it decides at what distance from the arena a Sooke resident would have to support the arena with his tax dollars."

Elder said the electoral district would likely apply for a recreation grant to be made possible from the provincial government through its proposed Community Recreation Facilities Fund Act.

Now We Know What's Up, Doc

But They're Cheaper Than Plumbers on House Calls

Your family doctor is still behind your plumber when it comes to pay for house calls in off hours.

The general practice physician will now get $24 for a house call in the evening or on a Saturday or Sunday under a new fee schedule agreed to by the provincial government and the B.C. Medical Association. The old rate was $16.

But sources in the industry said today that a plumbing contractor will charge you $24 an hour — for a minimum four hours — when a plumber is called out anytime after 4 p.m. and before 8 a.m.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, said today that it's fair to calculate a house call will take an average of about two hours.

If that is so, it means doctors come at half the price of plumbers. And that's making no allowance for the minimum four hours plumbers can claim under their contract.

The house call fee increase is just one of a number of changes under the agreement which has the province allotting an additional 6.7 per cent in funds for medicare. The increases won't affect most patients directly because almost everyone in the province is covered by medicare.

And the $24 charge for off-hour house calls isn't precisely accurate either. Doctors get only 90 per cent of fees under the schedule, the rest being given up to cover the administration costs of the government plan.

McCoy said people have complained in the past that they could not get doctors out at night. The fee change is an attempt by the association to get better service for people.

Among other increases under the new fee schedule:

—A general practitioner's specific examination, the most common office visit service — from $7.50 to $8.

—A day visit at a patient's home, from $12 to $16.

—Consultation with a dermatologist, from $19 to $20.

—Consultation with a psychiatrist, from $35 to $37.50.

McCoy said doctors' overhead costs have been increasing eight per cent a year, with some variation between sections of the profession.

"They had got to the point that doctors' incomes were declining because of the increase in overhead."

Corporation Tax Hike Passes

Only 12 minutes of the legislature's time was occupied Monday in giving approval in principle to a bill to increase corporation income tax from 10 to 12 per cent.

The brevity of debate preceding second reading of the amendments to the Income Tax Act was in marked contrast to the lengthy opposition speeches protesting the measure during the budget debate earlier in the session.

Spokesmen for all three opposition parties again criticized the move, saying the tax increase was unnecessary and would be passed on to consumers, but when second reading was put to a voice vote there were only a few muted "No's" from their side of the house.

Immediately, Premier Dave Barrett requested a formal vote and the bill received support only from the government members, in a 29-to-13 result which saw the Social Credit, Liberal and Conservative parties all voting against the principle of the legislation.

In moving second reading, Barrett told the house the increased tax would produce about $18 million annually in additional revenue. He said it represents a catching up with the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, where the corporate income tax is also at 12 per cent, and is an effort to ensure that corporations pay their fair share toward the cost of providing essential services in B.C.

After Conservatice house leader Scott Wallace, Liberal leader David Anderson and Newell Morrison (SC-Victoria) had all criticized the government for imposing the tax increase, Barrett dismissed the complaints as "specious nonsense based on presumption."

Attacking the Liberals in particular, for suggesting that those consumers on low incomes would be hardest hit by the higher tax, he said the only way that section of society can be helped is through the federal government increasing their basic income tax exemptions.

"They can't deduct white shirts and laundry and everything else the corporations can get away with," he said, in "tax rip-offs" that had been going on for years.

Barrett said he hoped his NDP colleagues in Ottawa would "vote against the Liberal government that is giving away tax concessions to every corporation in this country."

Addressing the Liberals across the floor of the house, he asked: "Why do you think we are here? To protect the large corporations?"

Barrett said the argument that business should only be taxed in times of depression and not when the economy is booming is "absolutely stupid."

"The time to tax is when the money is there." He said he was proud of the tax increase and also that B.C. is a wealthy province in which it is possible to plan services for people.

In replying to Socred criticism of another bill, which would exempt the family farm from succession duty where the farm passes to a child, Barrett made it clear that there will always be succession duty in B.C. as long as the NDP remains in power.

He said ex-premier W. A. C. Bennett had pledged he would never let the rich go untaxed, "until he discovered the Kelowna Charter" of policy principles prior to last year's provincial election.

"The wealthy people in this province have become wealthy because of the fruits of this province and they should pay a fair tax on succession duty and that is only proper," Barrett added.

For the Socreds, Morrison said the amendments don't go far enough. His party won't be satisfied, he said, until the whole act is repealed.

Envoys Stage Fair

OTTAWA (CP) — The diplomatic community held its version of a global village fair Monday as 27 countries set up stalls to sell national foods and products in a downtown hotel.

Organized by the wives of diplomats posted to Ottawa and local residents, the fair had one feature not found at less sophisticated gatherings — a booth with credit card facilities for diplomats short of ready cash.

The French booth offered perfume, the Indian section two racks of native clothing and the Sri Lanka exhibition offered tea. The Cuba exhibit was a hit with its iced daquiris and cigars.

In Mayor's Race

BURNABY (CP)—Dave Mercier, a former alderman, announced he will contest the Burnaby mayorality race in December. He said he will campaign for the next eight months.

Indians Urged to Seek Home Grant Back Pay

Premier Dave Barrett Monday invited Indian bands in B.C. to submit group applications for back payments to which they are entitled under changes to the provincial home acquisition program.

By this means, he said, the bands may be able to finance capital projects on reserves or to organize bulk-buying programs which would enable individual band members to benefit from lower costs in undertaking furnishing schemes or home improvements generally.

Barrett was moving second reading in the legislature of amendments to the Provincial Home Acquisition Grant Act, which for the first time would extend grants and loans available under the program to native Indians living on reserves.

He said the provincial government would "welcome" group requests, as had been submitted last week by Haida Indians from Masset, in the Queen Charlotte Islands. But in such cases the applications must include the signatures of individual band members who wish to take part in the group program.

Anyone is entitled to opt out of a group activity and apply for his or her personal back payments, Barrett said. The legislation would be retroactive to April 1, 1966, when the provincial home acquisition program started.

MLAs from opposition parties supported the legislation, but Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) urged the government to go further in correcting injustices to Indians.

Among his suggestions were that the provincial per capita grant paid to municipalities should also be made available to the 159 self-governing bands in the province, and that articles purchased by Indians for use on reserves should be exempted from the 5 per cent provincial sales tax.

In reply, however, Barrett rejected the latter proposal, claiming that if the tax exemption were allowed it would amount to a "reverse form of discrimination."

All citizens should pay taxes equally and receive benefits equally regardless of race, creed or color, he said.

The bill was given second reading.

Beware Blue Chips Bennett Warns Gov't

The NDP government was advised Monday against investing money from civil servants' and teachers' pension funds into common shares of corporate enterprises.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett said that although "blue chip" stocks may be making money for investors now, but in two or three years' time they may have collapsed.

Bennett was opposing amendments to the Civil Service Superannuation Act which will allow the government to invest civil servants' pension money into whichever corporations the cabinet designates. The amendments were approved in principle, however, by the legislature.

Bennett said many large companies are finding themselves caught in a cost-price squeeze and that many eventually could find themselves in serious economic trouble. He said that the government, if it invests in such ventures, will not be protected from a change in ownership in the corporations which could have an adverse effect on their operations.

Cabbage Patch Holds Amazing Variety

Getting into the cabbage patch may not sound very exciting but what you find growing there will amaze you, since more distinct forms of plants are likely to be discovered in this group of vegetables than in any other genus.

The genus is known collectively as Brassica, yielding such diverse edible plants as common cabbage and the turnip.

All are high in nutrition, especially in the easily destructible vitamin C, a good enough reason to grow these foods in the home garden so that loss of this essential element is reduced to a minimum between gathering or pulling from the soil and eating.

Broccoli is high on the list, both the purple and green sprouting, also known as Calabrese; in some countries the solid white cauliflower heads are called broccoli; Brussels sprouts (so named from the Belgian city where it was first grown commercially) are closely related to the crinkly winter Savoy cabbage raised for centuries in the mountainous district of that name in eastern France; the hardy curly kale, known also as Borecole, is amazingly resistant to hard frost; Russian kale is even hardier.

The red, or purple-headed cabbage has its own distinct flavor; variegated kale is useful for three purposes — flower bed decoration, floral arrangements and for eating. In cooking, the lovely crested leaves of rose, crimson, purple and ivory white all turn to an appetizing green.

Portugal cabbage of Couve Tronchuda is listed in some seed catalogues. The midribs only are used of this plant, though a fairly tight cabbage forms at the head of the plant.

★ ★ ★

Chinese Cabbage is found in Victoria stores but not so often in local cabbage patches. Seed is listed, the recommended one is usually Wong Bok. Kohlrabi is a delicately flavored turnip-like vegetable which grows on top of the soil anchored by its feeding roots. It, and the more conventional turnips are also Brassicas.

Nine-Star-Broccoli holds its place in the cabbage patch for several years for it is said to be indeed perennial. I have the seeds now to sow by the middle of April, expecting the broccoli heads to form a year from sowing.

Just now in April, cabbages and the white cauliflowers for late summer should be set out in the garden as small plants. Seeds of Chinese cabbage need to be sown now where they are to grow and later thinned to stand about eight inches apart.

All the cabbage family must have firm soil. Tread it before putting in plants, and firm it around the stems. For safeguarding against club root disease, dust each planting hole with lime. This is a preventive, not a cure.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

For those who believe that bridge is only a game (many believe that it is a maniacal obsession), the following item is offered in refutation. The incident occurred in the early 1930's, and is quoted verbatim as it appeared in a Chicago newspaper some 40 years ago.

"Cut Glass Has Its Uses

"Chicago — Mrs. Lila Gray Colyer, who held 13 diamonds in a bridge game and won the contract at six notrump after a spade bid by an opponent, is suing for divorce. When she was set 12 tricks, her husband, so the complaint avers, hit her with a cut-glass bowl, the nearest missile."

In today's deal, we have a situation remotely similar in type to the bidding of six notrump with 13 diamonds. The difference is that in this deal, the bidder entertained hopes of fulfilling his contract. The hand came up in a duplicate game.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ Q 5
♡ J 6
◇ A K Q J 10 7 3
♣ J 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

South's opening bid of three notrump is a conventional type of bid employed by some experts. It is known as the "gambling three-notrump opening," and is made on a solid seven-card suit with a smattering of high-card strength on the outside. As he makes the call, the bidder hopes (1) that partner will have enough "stuff" to enable the contract to be fulfilled; or, failing that, (2) there is the hope that the defenders will not find the winning defense.

After West had opened a low spade, and the dummy came into view, South perceived that he could cash eight sure winners. If he played low from dummy, and East possessed the spade king, declarer figured to go down five or six tricks. The issue was whether declarer should settle for down one; or to gamble going down five or six tricks (and possibly running the risk that partner might throw the nearest available missile at him).

As luck would have it, declarer made a decision which, if it had turned out unfavorably, would probably have been described as an "atrocious guess": he played low from dummy at trick one. East's jack of spades was put up, and declarer, with a sigh of relief, won the trick with his queen. He then claimed his contract: two spades and seven diamonds.

Thousands Flee Waves

Roof-top level waves pound walls of new subdivision fronting Lake Ontario

Times News Services

Pounding waves pushed by gusting winds forced the evacuation of thousands of families on both the Canadian and U.S. sides of Lakes Erie and Ontario today.

While the Canadian evacuations were carried out smoothly, troops were called in on the U.S. side of Lake Erie to prevent looting of abandoned homes.

Hardest hit was the Windsor area where an estimated 1,600 abandoned their homes when easterly winds reached 50 miles an hour. The winds began a westerly shift today but hundreds of families did not return.

In Toledo, winds pushed water from western Lake Erie into city and suburban streets and flooded neighboring shoreline communities. Water was two feet deep in some streets.

MUCH DAMAGE

About 500 were evacuated in Toledo and although there were no reports of injuries, officials said damage would be considerable.

The water level dropped several feet early today.

There were requests from some western Ontario townships for the use of troops in flood control, and in the Ontario legislature Liberal Richard Ruston of Essex-Kent asked that the province be declared a major disaster area so that federal aid could be provided.

Flooding on the north shore of Lake Erie extended from the mouth of the Detroit River, 50 miles east to Erieau.

Many residents had to flee their homes for the third time in six months. Earlier storms forced them out last November and last month.

About 1,000 residents in Mersea Township, near Lake Erie, were evacuated. At least 30 cottages, some of them new, were lost in one stretch of shoreline, said Reeve Clinton Tofflemire.

HOMES FLOODED

He said only one of the cottages was occupied and it was safely evacuated.

Another 100 homes in subdivisions were flooded, he said, and at least 750 acres of prime farmland flooded and another 1,500 acres threatened as a major dike in the area broke down.

Some residential parts of Mersea township were under six feet of water.

With nowhere for its water to empty, the Detroit River backed up halfway to Lake St. Clair, creating the most serious flooding so far along its shores.

At La Salle, water reached the centre of the community one-quarter of a mile from the river.

Flooding was reported in parts of Windsor itself, where a section of Riverside Drive was closed, and in lakefront communities on the south shore of Lake St. Clair, where some persons had to be evacuated as early as Saturday.

HIGH WAVES

High waves broke through the rebuilt dikes on the east side of Pelee Island, flooding about 500 acres of farmland.

Saltfleet Township council declared a state of emergency in that community at the western tip of Lake Ontario.

Lakeshore residents in the Toronto area watched the strips of land between their homes and Lake Ontario grow still narrower as five-foot waves added to soil erosion.

Meanwhile a spring storm sweeping the midwestern U.S. dumped up to 18 inches of snow and brought new dangers to weakened levees along the rain-swollen Mississippi River system.

In Kaskasia Island, 60 miles south of St. Louis, five-foot waves and 60-mile-an-hour winds forced evacuation of all but 16 of the island's 300 residents.

So far, seven million acres of land along the Mississippi system are under water, 6,000 families have been evacuated and damage has reached $160 million.

NEW BILL SOON ON MERGERS

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Monday he intends to introduce a bill "in the next day or two" empowering the cabinet to order amalgamation of local areas without plebiscites.

British Columbia Supreme Court ruled recently that the municipal affairs minister cannot order the amalgamation of Kamloops and Kelowna with their respective suburbs without a vote.

Lorimer said Monday the court decision was based on existing law, not new legislation of the kind he is proposing.

"I don't think there is any change," he said.

"When I discussed the amalgamation issue (involving Kamloops and Kelowna) I said there would have to be legislation brought in, and there will be legislation brought in," said Lorimer.

B.C. Eyes More Parks For Boaters

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Creation of a series of marine parks in British Columbia inland waters from the Gulf Islands through to Prince Rupert, was proposed today by Resource Minister Robert Williams.

Parks in the government's tentative marine park program include:

Two on West Redonda Island — Roscoe Bay and Walsh Cove;

Three parks on Cortez Island—Carrington Bay, Squirrel Cove and Von Donop Inlet;

Two in the vicinity of Rivers Inlet and one at Kingcome Inlet, situated north of Campbell River.

Surveys are being conducted in other areas, the minister said.

"We have one of the most beautiful inland waters in the world," he said. "It is essential that we plan now to preserve key areas on those islands for the people of this province."

PRIVATELY-OWNED

The minister admitted that the Gulf Islands presented a difficulty as most of the land is privately-owned — some by large corporations, foreign and Canadian.

But he emphasized that more marine parks would be established in the Gulf Islands to complement those already heavily used by both Canadian and U.S. boaters.

"The Gulf Islands are vitally important because of their close proximity to the densely populated east coast of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland," he said.

DESOLATION SOUND

The new government's first marine park, announced Monday, is at Desolation Sound, a 22-square-mile area situated 19 nautical miles from Campbell River.

Widely known for its warm waters and scenic anchorages Grace Harbor, Prideaux and Tenedos Bay — the park's winding waterways are safe for trailer boats and even canoes. It includes freshwater lakes and 6,653 miles of foreshore.

BASEL — A British charter airliner carrying 139 tourists to Basel's spring fair crashed and exploded in a blizzard today.

Police announced 106 persons were killed.

Some of the 40 survivors escaped without injury, police said.

The Unicorn Travel Agency in England, which organized the flight, said 90 per cent of the passengers were women, on a day trip to the Swiss fair.

The plane, on a flight from Bristol, crashed five minutes before it was scheduled to land.

Farmers interviewed by Swiss radio said 20 persons on the ground were injured when pieces of the plane struck a farmhouse.

The entire area was isolated by power and telephone failures.

The plane approached Basel airport from the north for an instrument-aided landing in heavy snowfall.

Then, the airport said, the pilot pulled up and roared away to the south disappearing quickly in the blinding snow. Ten minutes later radio contact broke off.

The Swiss army and police joined in the rescue efforts hampered by deep snow.

Rescuers reached the crash area on foot. Survivors were flown out by helicopters.

In Stuttgart, West Germany five persons were killed when a twin-engine aircraft crashed also during a snow storm near that city's Echterdingen airport today.

The aircraft burst into flames after crashing by the side of a busy motorway.

Police said it appeared to encounter difficulties shortly after takeoff for Brussels. The pilot had attempted an emergency landing.

HE LEFT POLICE DUMBFOUNDED

GLASGOW (UPI) — James Burke, 18, spent the weekend in jail awaiting trial on charges of disturbing the peace because, police said, he was "bawling, shouting and screaming" at a soccer match Saturday.

The court dismissed the charge Monday when it learned Burke is deaf and dumb.

SPILL PACT SIGNED BY CANADA, U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — A contingency plan for oil spills on the east and west coasts has been reached with the United States, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Davis told reporters after a meeting with Russell Train, chairman of the U.S. president's council on environmental quality, that the agreement extends current provisions for the Great Lakes to coastal waters.

Davis said the coastal oil spill contingency plan involves oil tanker routes, navigational aids to prevent spill disasters and methods of cleaning up spills.

Train said the two groups discussed only the environmental problems of the oil-tanker route. He said he supports President Nixon's preference for the Alaska pipeline and West Coast tanker route over alternative methods of transporting Alaskan oils.

The environment minister said the oil spill contingency plan would apply particularly to the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Georgia Strait.

Envoys Order Families Out

PHNOM PENH — Diplomatic sources said today three foreign embassies, faced with dwindling supplies and a threatened Communist attack on Phnom Penh on Friday, have ordered all dependents temporarily out of the capital.

Word of the evacuation came as a U.S. embassy spokesman said Washington had approved an airlift of fuel supplies to ease critical shortages caused by encirclement of the capital by Communist troops.

The sources said the evacuation of the British, Japanese and Israeli embassies will be completed by Friday the Buddhist new year.

They said the evacuation was prompted not only by security problems, but also because of shortages of fuel, power blackouts and a shrinking water supply.

Military intelligence reports indicate that Communist units now operating within a 15-mile radius of the capital are planning to launch a combined rocket and sapper attack on the capital in celebration of the new year.

The Vietnam truce supervising organization said today it is halting all of its helicopter flights indefinitely, apparently because of a helicopter downed Saturday over territory controlled by Communists.

Nine men, one of them a Canadian died in the crash.

A spokesman read newsmen a one-sentence statement announcing the decision, but did not elaborate on the reasons.

Meanwhile, two Canadian officers crossed the Thach Han River at Quang Tri today to begin an investigation on the crash.

The investigators are expected to spend about two days in the bush in the northwest corner of the country where the Viet Cong maintain armed control.

The Viet Cong have described the crash as an "accident."

Israelis Raid Beirut

Times News Services

Israeli commandos stormed into the heart of Beirut today, killing three top Palestinian guerrilla leaders in their apartment and launching lightning attacks on refugee camps.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam announced the resignation of his government following an emergency cabinet meeting to discuss the pre-dawn attack.

The troops landed on beaches near Beirut, sped into the city in six U.S.-built cars rented earlier by Israeli secret agents, and later escaped by plane and helicopter.

It was the first Israeli strike into the heart of Beirut and the Israeli chief of staff said it was a reprisal raid that struck a "serious blow" to the guerrilla movement.

The Lebanese said the raid showed no one is safe from Israeli aggression.

The troops blasted their way into two apartment buildings in the centre of Beirut with machine guns and killed Kamal Nasser, spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization, and Al Fatah leaders Kamal Adwan and Mohammed Najjar.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir called a special session of parliament in Jerusalem to consider recent Arab guerrilla attacks against the Israelis and a government communique disclosed for the first time Rome police had foiled an Arab attempt to hijack an El Al airliner there last week.

"It was very marvellous because we killed the murderers who were planning to murder again," she told parliament. "Shining pages will be written about this."

The Israeli guerrillas today also attacked a refugee camp at Sabra which houses 5,000 Palestinians, and said at least 30 persons were killed. Residents were searching the debris of blown-up buildings for more bodies.

One of the buildings attacked was the headquarters of the Maoist Popular Democratic Front.

The raiders went on to the Dikwaneh camp, which houses 8,000 refugees, and blew up a factory, police said. Guerrillas immediately surrounded the area and refused entry to Lebanese authorities.

An army lieutenant in Sidon said the Israelis landed there from the sea and blew up three cars inside the garage of a gas station and an empty shed alongside.

The Israeli chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. David Elazar, said in Tel Aviv that two Israelis were killed in the 2½-hour raid and two were wounded. He warned that Israel may hit Beirut again, saying: "It is impossible to honor the sovereignty of Lebanon and its capital when there is complete freedom for the terrorists, their bases and commands in Lebanese territory."

The guerrilla leadership issued a later statement saying the killing of the three leaders was carried out by agents of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, that it was an inside job and that report of Israeli planes and helicopters were just a coverup.

The Israeli raid came 12 hours after guerrilla attacks in Nicosia which left one Arab dead and three wounded.

In Nicosia today, police were placed on full alert to prevent a recurrence of Monday's violence resulting from the guerrilla attacks.

Prior to the attacks in Cyprus, more than 30 bombs exploded and there was scattered shooting that President Archbishop Makarios blamed on Cypriot extremists.

No More Bargain Gas: Nimsick

B.C. cannot continue to export its natural gas to foreign markets at "bargain basement prices" when there is only 10 years supply left, Mines Minister and Petroleum Resources minister Leo Nimsick said today.

Nimsick announced that he has arranged a special meeting with officials of the National Energy Board to express the NDP government's concern about the low price and high quality of natural gas being exported.

The meeting will take place Friday in Ottawa, where Nimsick will be attending a federal conference of mines ministers.

Nimsick said he is "deeply concerned" about the state of natural gas reserves left in the province. Natural gas supplies will last no longer than 1983 he said, "a mere 10 years."

The minister added that even if the historical rate of natural gas discoveries is taken into account, "there will not be sufficient supplies to meet domestic and export demands beyond 1989."

"We are facing the very grim picture of running out of gas in less than 20 years, while we continue to deliver this non-replenishable resource to the United States at rates that amount to a give-away," he said.

Nimsick blamed the situation on a "lack of foresight" by the former Social Credit government and lack of action on the part of federal authorities such as the National Energy Board.

Nimsick said present NEB regulations provide that the export price of natural gas cannot be set at less than 105 per cent of the domestic price being charged.

"Instead of using this level as a floor, the NEB has been using it as a ceiling when the level should have been no less than 150 per cent," he said.

"We cannot support continued gas exports at current terms, when today's proved resources will be used up in 10 years."

Nimsick criticized a special rate on natural gas being given to El Paso Natural Gas, an American customer of B.C.'s Westcoast Transmission. The price charged for B.C.'s gas should reflect rising prices at B.C. and other North American wellheads, he said.

The minister added that all gas exports should be permitted only where future domestic needs are satisfactorily met.

He said B.C. residents in the Kootenays are in danger of becoming victims to the proposed two-price policy being considered by Alberta. B.C.'s domestic consumers are already paying twice the price for natural gas that Albertans have to pay, he said.

"British Columbians will become foreigners from the point of view of Alberta's Conservative government," he said.

Nimsick termed the B.C. government's position on additional exports of natural gas according to present or proposed terms as one of "solid opposition."
